A look at 'The other side'

Local organization conveys lives of poor through 'poverty simulation'

By MATT PERA

mpera@nwnewsgroup.com

WAUKEGAN – I was an exfelon. I had no hope. I couldn't get a job. And I had no money.

That pretty well sums up the orientation I was given when I participated in a "poverty simulation" on May 10 at the Community Action Partnership of Lake County (CAP), based in Waukegan.

CAP organized the simulation with the goal of giving Lake County residents a glimpse of what it means to be in a desperate situation.

Hasan Hakeem, marketing director for CAP, along with other CAP representatives, transformed the organization's banquet and meeting center on Glen 'Flora Avenue into "Smallville," a virtual town through which the simulation participants had to make their

The town included a mayor, known as "Mayor Red," a radio station called "WB Crazy," a housing office, a social services office, a financial advisor and a few other features geared toward helping people get on their feet.

As soon as I entered the simulation, I became Donald Brooks, an ex-felon who had just been released from jail.

"He's being punished in so many ways," Hakeem told me. "He has absolutely nothing. Now you've got to find somebody that's going to listen to you."

With a handful of 15-minute "weeks" to integrate myself into Smallville, I found that was easier said than done.

Hasan Hakeem, Community Action Partnership of Lake County, reviews statistics on poverty with Charles Fitzgerald, Shields Township Supervisor, during CAP's "poverty simulation". CAPs invited the public to participate in a simulation that was designed to give people who have never endured poverty an idea of what it's like to be poor. The Banquet and Meeting Center at 1200 Glen Flora Ave., Waukegan, was turned into a small city, during the simulation. Community members, and local politicians were asked to role-play the lives of low-income families. Their task was to provide for food, shelter and other basic necessities for a family.

Some parts of a newspaper should be puzzling

Crossword puzzle is back. So is the horoscope.

And, for people of all levels of skills and smarts, we introduce Sudoku.

You will find them every week in the LakeLife section, which offers a wide variety of features, fun news, and things to do.

Lots of people like to do crossword puzzles. Some of them were upset when the crossword made only an occasional appearance in the Journal after the redesign in early March.

Lots of people also enjoy reading the horoscope. That's great, but don't make any big bets based on what you read. The column is intended to be used for entertainment, not financial planning.

Lots of people also have got into the Sudoku craze.

This week, we give everyone an opportunity to try this numbers stumper. Everyone.

Inside LakeLife you will find four puzzles, ranging in difficulty - they tell us - from easy to hard. You might want to start with the easy one.

Sudoku also will become a regular part of your Journal.

In addition to offering local news and features, a community newspaper ought to offer a little fun, too.

So try the crossword puzzle and Sudoku.

But first, you might want to check the horoscope to see whether it's a good day for you to be trying new things.

As always, your comments are welcome. Send e-mail llough@nwnewsgroup.com.

Thanks for reading the Journal.

Aquatic center to honor swimming teacher

By TARA CLIFTON

tclifton@nwnewsgroup.com

ANTIOCH – The long-awaited aquatic center still has quite a way to go before construction, but at least it now has an official name.

Trustees named the planned site the Winnie Sorenson Aquatic Center to honor the woman who spent a good chunk of her life teaching kids to swim.

Sorenson, who will be 87 on May 24, has worked at the Antioch Aqua Center every summer since it opened in 1958.

Laurie Stahl, director of Antioch's parks and recreation department, said Sorenson has taught roughly 2,500 Antioch children during the past 48 years.

"She can still do a perfect swan dive off the diving board," Stahl said at a recent village board meeting. "She's an inspiration to everyone."

State Caraca Section Control of the section of the Trustee Barbara Porch suggested naming the aquatic center after Sorenson two years ago when the board presented her with a plaque thanking her for her community service.

Sorenson plans on teaching swimming lessons again this summer, Stahl said, even after recovering from colon cancer during the winter.

Sorenson was diagnosed in August 2005, and shortly after had surgery to remove it.

For the past 20 years Sorenson has lived in Florida during the winter and drives back to Antioch to live with friends for the summer so she can teach at the agua center, Stahl said.

Stahl told trustees she would like a sign to be put up near the aquatic center site, along North Ave., to let residents know of the new name.

"It would mean a lot to her knowing it's going to be a reality," Stahl said.

Parents Day Out, Tomorrow's Future programs teach, nurture

By TARA CLIFTON tclifton@nwnewsgroup.com

ANTIOCH – A small group of 3-yearolds sat in front of their teacher one morning, listening intently as she read them a story from a large, colorful book.

The classroom seemed to be the quietest on the downstairs floor of the United Methodist Church of Antioch, 848 Main St., where Parents Day Out is housed.

Tina Markarian, director of the preschool for 2- to 5-year-olds, walked down the halls, proudly showing each room.

One group of children sang "Jesus Loves Me" in one room, the melody bouncing off the walls. Toys clattering to the floor, little ones squealing in play, and other noises permeated the atmosphere.

That morning was just another normal day at the church, which has seemed to make children its focus. Not only is Parents Day Out there, but also a daycare program called Tomorrow's Future, which opened Feb. 6.

Parents Day Out started out roughly 10 years ago as a safe place for parents to drop their kids off for an afternoon so they could have a break to do grocery shopping and take care of other errands, Markarian said.

From there, the program grew into a preschool where kids learn the alphabet, numbers, the basics of the Christian faith and more.

Kids attend up to two half-day sessions a week.

"It's a very positive environment," Markarian said. "There's a lot of hugging. I'll go in there and give them a kiss on the forehead."

Staffers at Tomorrow's Future, located upstairs at the church, display the same affection to the children.

With seizures, there are no simple answers.

George Morris, MD (center), director of the Regional Epilepsy Center, Veronica Sosa, MD, and Christopher Inglese, MD are leading the way to more effective treatment of epilepsy.

At the Regional Epilepsy Center, we take a specialized approach that emphasizes comprehensive diagnosis and treatment, and a team approach to care. Working together, our nationally recognized neurologists and neurosurgeons are dedicated to helping each individual patient. The result is hundreds who have seen their seizures reduced or eliminated altogether.

The National Association of Epilepsy Centers has recognized our program with a Level 4 designation, the highest possible and indicating that we offer the broadest range of medical and surgical treatment options. Our comprehensive offering includes all FDA-approved anti-seizure medications, investigational medication trials, and a team of neuroscientists to apply advanced surgical techniques where necessary. Another treatment option we offer is the Vagus Nerve Stimulator, which is an alternative to surgery. A "pacemaker for the brain", this device is implanted under the skin and delivers an electric shock to the Vagus nerve throughout the day to control or prevent seizures. Sub-specialist care is also available in pediatric neurology and the management of epilepsy in women.

We treat both adults and children and have an active Second Opinion Program, which begins with a comprehensive evaluation at our specialized facility at Aurora St. Luke's Medical Center.

¹Statistics show that 85% of patients treated at the Regional Epilepsy Center achieve a 90% or greater reduction in seizures.

Big drops, high gains

D41 workers compete in weight contest

By TARA CLIFTON

tclifton@nwnewsgroup.com

LAKE VILLA - Employees at School District 41 are a bunch of losers, but they like it that way.

Stealing the idea from NBC's "The Biggest Loser," where the contestant who loses the most weight wins a huge cash prize, district workers also are sweating to drop the pounds, but to benefit charity.

Julie Graf, a fourth-grade teacher at Hooper School in Lindenhurst, organized the district's contest.

Faculty from all four elementary schools are participating, and Graf said the 83 contestants are having a blast working together to lose weight.

"It's a friendly competition, and you're not doing it by yourself," Graf said. "I know I have an easier time doing it if I'm not alone."

To compete, each person put in $10 in February, when the contest began, Graf said. The person who drops the most weight wins the total money donated from his or her school.

And not only are individuals competing against each other, but each school is vying to be the biggest loser as well, Graf said.

The winning school's prize is a donation in its name to the Susan B. Komen Foundation from the three losing schools. If Pleviak School wins, Graf said officials want their donation to go to the Make-A-Wish Foundation.

But the prizes don't end there. Curves of Lindenhurst found out about the school district's contest, Graf said, and decided to award the winner of each school three free months of working out at the weight loss facility for Competitors were weighed Feb. 21 and will be weighed again May 22, Graf said. The percentage of weight lost will be tallied and winners will be chosen.

Graf said teachers, faculty and staff have formed various ways to encourage each other to work out and eat right.

Some host aerobics classes or kickboxing classes, for example. Graf has handed out water bottles with encouraging words taped on them.

The contest has worked for Graf, as well. Since February, she has lost about 18 pounds.

"We'll walk down the hall together and talk about it, saying 'These pants used to be tight!'" Graf said.

Program helps out teens

By TARA CLIFTON

tclifton@nwnewsgroup.com

LAKE VILLA – Being a teenager can be tough. Putting teenagers together at school can be even tougher.

But now young adults at Lakes Community High School have another way to deal with conflicts that can sometimes arise.

A new program at Lakes High lets students work through problems with the help of their trained peers.

The two-week-old peer mediation program has had only a few sessions, but the disagreements addressed in the sessions have been smoothed out, said David Raczynski, a Lakes social worker.

Problems addressed a range from rumors and racial comments to boyfriend/girl-friend troubles and bullying, Raczynski said.

Antioch Community High School started its own conflict resolution program earlier this school year.

Students who showed leadership skills were chosen to be mediators, Raczynski said, and trained for a day on how to work with others to solve conflicts.

The 16 mediators will have monthly meetings to learn additional methods.

Students, who feel they need outside assistance to settle social problems, fill out a form and turn it into the school's office, Raczynski said. Raczynski and Christina Foss, the school's other social worker, find a meeting time that works for all involved.

During the sessions, mediators help students brainstorm solutions to their problems.

A form is signed once an agreement is reached.

Raczynski said he and Foss plan to keep track of those who use the peer mediation program to see if the sessions helped.

Programs reaching to kids

a little boy who ran toward her with arms outstretched.

"Oh, he is just too cute," Godlewski said. "I would take him home; he has the sweetest disposition." .

Godlewski's program is a full-time daycare, taking in kids from 6 weeks to 12 years of age. Right now they have 24 children, with a license to take care of 74.

Parents Day Out currently teaches 75 kids. One-year-olds played in a room in the Tomorrow's Future program. Curtains, striped with red and white, hung from wide windows, parted to let the sunlight in. Little Grace Walter, 20 months, rolled a blue ball back and forth on the floor to a playmate.

Markarian and Godlewski love working in the same building, they said, and they feel no competition with each other because their programs are so different,

Among many other things, Parents Day Out is Christian-based and costs $16 per day. Tomorrow's Future is secular and the price depends on attendance.

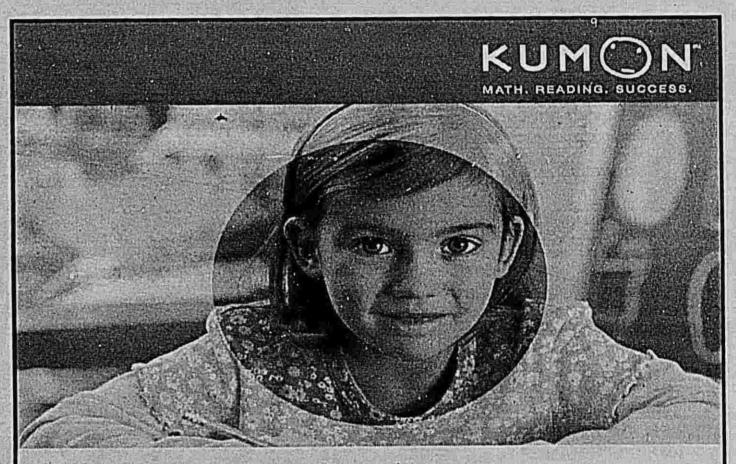

But the two directors hold one major thing in common: their love of children.

Markarian is mother to five, aged seven to 26. Godlewski has two, 16 and 21.

"I do this [childcare] because I can," Markarian said. "They make me tired, but they make me feel good."

The programs' employees also share this

"They have their lives and safety in their hands," Markarian said. "They do this because they love children."

LET YOUR CHILD AMAZE YOU.

Kumon is a different kind of after-school learning program, where children master the basics of math and reading through daily practice.

Kumon students also build strong learning skills, disciplined study habits, and the confidence they need to succeed in school...and beyond.

Just imagine where that could take your child.

Simulation offers glimpes into hardship

• CAP

As Donald Brooks, I had dropped out of high school in 10th grade, had been arrested for selling drugs at 22, spent three years in jail, had two kids, ages three and five, and was trying to get a job in order to support my family.

I had three weeks to make it happen.

Week One

The first person I met was Carl Soriaga, the human services and fiscal director at CAP.

It was a short meeting.

"You don't have any assets?" he asked.

"I've got nothing," I said.

"I would suggest that you go to the caseworker first," he said. "She will be able to tell you what to do."

The caseworker's office was chaotic. Many of the people looking for help were already there and the waiting room was by far the most crowded area in Smallville.

People were jockeying for position in line and arguing about who was next. Above that noise was Willie Brooks, the host of "WB Crazy's" radio show.

He walked through the crowd with a microphone like a carnival barker, talking to various people in a booming voice, asking them about their problems, why they hadn't gotten a job and what their plans were.

All of the voices blended into a sustained noise that carried throughout the room, adding to the stress of the situation.

I took a seat in the caseworker's waiting room, but soon realized I was not going to get a meeting during my first week.

Week Two

I heard about a grocery store called King's Way that had announced it was hiring 200 new employees. Much of the crowd had already shifted there from the caseworker's office though, and I had already spent my entire first week waiting in a line.

I decided it was a better idea to meet with a caseworker first to find out what kind of assistance I could get before looking for a job.

But the wait there was long too, and I still ended up spending a majority of my time waiting, until I was approached by a police officer who said Mayor Red wanted to meet with me.

I was escorted to the mayor's office, where I explained my background and told him I had hit dead ends everywhere I went.

"Yeah," he said. "That's tough."

"So what do you think I should I do?" I asked.

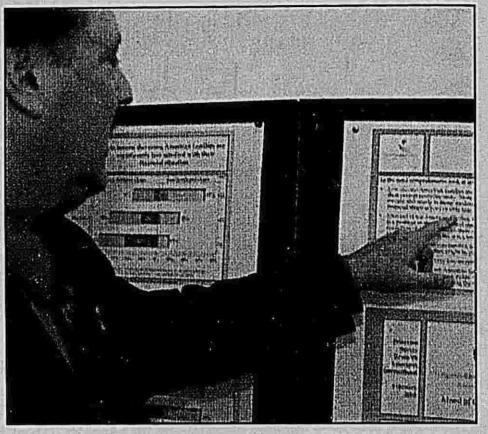

"So, you're a felon, a convicted felon," the mayor said.

"That's right," I said.
"Well Donald, I wish you the best."

I asked him if he had any advice at all, to which he said, "Endeavor to persevere."

"Endeavor to persevere?" I asked. "What does that even mean?"

"You have a great day, Donald," he said.

Annie Christig - achristie@nwnewsgroup.com

Charles Fitzgerald, Shields Township Supervisor, reviews the overview of the Community Action Partnership of Lake County "poverty simulation".

Week Three

I decided to try King's Way again.

When I got there, I talked to Wendy Williams, a recruiter for the grocery store, who gave me an application and math aptitude test.

She told me they were hiring for all positions, including cashiers, baggers, night stockers and managers.

I filled out the application, but, having dropped out of high school, had some trouble with the math aptitude test and left several of the problems blank.

It was the first application I had completed since getting out of jail, meaning it was the first time I had to verify I had been convicted of a felony. I figured there was little point, but I headed back to King's Way to turn it in to Williams.

During the interview I explained that I was trying to find some stability after having a good deal of problems in the past.

"I'm a hard worker," I said.
"I'm just really trying to get my life back together and I think by getting this job, I can really take the next step and turn things around. But it's hard to turn things around when you don't have any money."

I was ready for her to tell me King's Way didn't have anything for me, and began to prepare for more quality time in the waiting room at the caseworker's office, when she told me I could start work as a stocker the following day.

It was an unexpected and sudden turn of events. I didn't think I had much of a chance getting a job, but Williams apparently saw that I wasn't looking to cause more trouble, I was trying to get away from it.

'A paycheck away'

When the simulation ended, participants gathered to discuss what was learned.

For me, in 45 short minutes, I learned how frustrating it was to be in a situation that seemed completely hopeless.

It is something I have thought about it on my own several times, what it would mean to be on the fringe of society, but the poverty simulation drove home how helpless that can make you feel.

And I wasn't the only one who felt that way.

Shields Township Supervisor Charles Fitzgerald, who also went through the simulation as an ex-felon (and was not lucky enough to get a job in the end) said his participation gave him a better perspective on people who are in desperate need of help.

"As elected officials people come to us," he said. "And, it's interesting to be on the other side."

Waukegan Township Supervisor Patricia Jones, who also attended the simulation, reminded the participants that they might not be as far removed from actual poverty as they think.

"I know I'm just a paycheck away from being right in this situation," she said. "Even if we're pretending, we really aren't because the job can be taken away immediately."

Getting her kicks

Eight-year-old Lake Villa resident works beyond limitations

By HELEN MANSFIELD

hmansfield@nwnewsgroup.com

ROUND LAKE HEIGHTS – Evelyn Felipez of Lake Villa is a spunky and beautiful, young girl.

Her mother, Siri is from Thailand, so Evelyn has a medium, bright complexion, long jet-black hair and dark, slightly almond-shaped eyes.

Evelyn may resemble an Asian doll, but the little firecracker could kick your butt if she had to.

By day, Evelyn, 8, attends Hillcrest Elementary School. After school, she can be found at Traditional Martial Arts Academy in Round Lake Heights, where she takes tae kwon do four to five days a week.

At birth, Evelyn was diagnosed as having spina bifida. She was born with a hole in her spine and she was partially paralyzed.

When she started tae kwon do in September of last year, she showed up with crutches.

"I wanted to do it," Evelyn said.

John Roberts, a seventh-degree black belt in his own right and owner of the academy, said Evelyn worked really hard for her green belt that hangs around her tiny waist.

Siri said Evelyn has been wanting to do tae kwon do since she was 5 years old. By taking tae kwon do, Siri said she believes Evelyn's condition has improved.

"This is her therapy," Siri said.

Evelyn walks a bit stifflegged, but when she does her tae kwon do moves, she is very smooth and deliberate.

Her mother said that Evelyn, who already was very out-going, has become even more extroverted. "It's made her very confident and she's learning Korean," Siri said.

Evelyn said her condition doesn't cause her pain and she never hurts.

"I'm not afraid of getting hurt," Evelyn said. "I hope to do it for a long time."

Siri said she hopes her daughter will be the first black belt with spina bifida in Lake County.

"I think it's good for everyone," Evelyn said. "It makes you strong and it's good for your mind."

Evelyn's older sister, Alysia, 13, took up tae kwon do after her sister started. She has earned a yellow belt.

Lauren Roberts, John Roberts' wife, said Evelyn's classmates have been supportive of her.

"The other students have never, not accepted Evelyn. Kids can be nasty, but they are here to help her," Lauren Roberts said. "We've had a good group, but that's also part of tae kwon do ... respect."

D41 trying to create ordinance to ensure funds

By TARA CLIFTON

tclifton@nwnewsgroup.com

LAKE VILLA - School District 41 hopes to have an ordinance in place by next month that will help ensure schools that they have enough money to educate their kids.

School board officials are discussing the creation of an ordinance that would enable the district to use lag fees to fund educational expenses, said District Superintendent Mike Anderson.

Anderson said this especially would be helpful for Round Lake Beach, Lake Villa and Lindenhurst, as they have the most growth right now.

Lag fees, also called transition fees, are what property developers pay schools once the property is ready to be occupied, Anderson said. Districts can use these fees to pay for the education of children.

The amount developers pay is based on the Naperville formula, which is founded upon projections of how many children would enter the school district because of new homes. Exact prices come from how much the child's house costs.

"This would be a tremendous boon to us." Anderson said of the possibility of creating the ordinance. "We're trying to look to the future."

Jeff Gordon vs. Ken Schrader

Gordon felt like his pursuit of Dodge Charger 500 victor Greg Biffle was unnecessarily hindered by Schrader's lapped car, and he was a bit angry with Schrader after the race. "We're coming up to take the white flag, and the two leaders are battling and we got a run on him (Biffle) and you would just expect like the other lapped cars that we came up on, he (Schrader) would give a little bit more room. And he gave plenty of room to the No. 16 (Biffle)," said Gordon. "I felt like (with) a little bit of extra room ... it killed all my momentum and made the car push even worse up in the wall. So I lost any chance that I had."

NASCAR This Week's Monte Dutton gives his take: "Gordon was frustrated, but Schrader didn't really do anything wrong. Even Gordon conceded: "If I hadn't gotten into the wall (passing Matt Kenseth) earlier, it might not even have been a factor."

Old school softball

Libertyville's, Lakes' 1-0 pitching classic harkens back to a bygone era

By DANIEL J. PATRICK dpatrick@nwnewsgroup.com

In the years past, a baseball or softball box score rarely had more than five runs split between both teams. In the era of juiced balls and juiced players, it's always nice to see a good, oldfashioned 1-0 shutout.

Pitchers' duel

The Lakes-Libertyville game was the definition of old school diamond duel. The winning pitcher, Lakes' Claire Seaver, gave up just two hits, no walks and fanned four in a complete game. Libertyville's Gina DeMarco put up similar numbers, giving up three hits and striking out five in her own complete appearance.

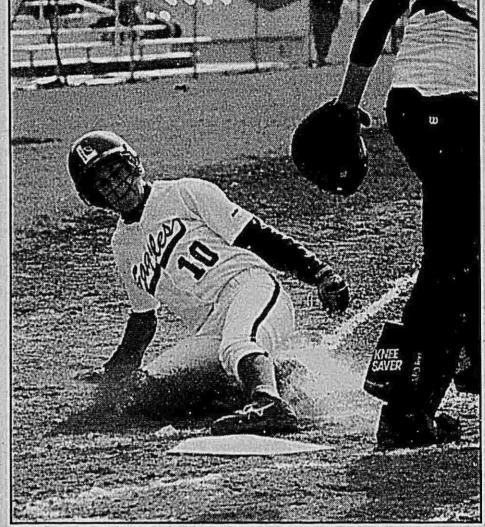

"[Seaver] threw very well, she didn't throw any bad pitches," Sexton said. "She controlled what she did and she listened to her catcher. She didn't bring too much and she gave the defense routine balls on the field that led to easy Libertyville coach Mary Hoyer had some good words for her hurler as well. While DeMarco came away with the loss, her coach was very pleased with the senior's pitching.

"That's what we expect out of [DeMarco]," Hover said, "That's typical for her, having five strikeouts and limiting the other team to just a few hits. You always want to win, but she threw a good game."

As for Seaver, the weight of two outs, a onerun lead with runners on second and third in the seventh are just what she loves to carry on her back.

Morel mushroom mania

The weather has been perfect, both in temperature and precipitation, for hunting. The quarry that you should be stalking right now is the elusive morel mushroom.

The morel is the filet mignon of the mush-dom. Ranging to more than 6 inches in height, these babies are an incredible taste treat. Morels are light brown or black and the caps are covered with ridges or pits that have been described as resembling either a brain, a sponge or a prune.

Steve Sarley

There are morel look-alikes, but can easily be discerned. A true morel is hollow on the inside when bisected with a knife, and the stem and cap always are connected in one continuous piece.

Because morels cannot be raised commercially, good morel grounds are guarded with an incredible passion.

Sometimes morels will appear in the same spot for consecutive years and then - poof! they disappear from that immediate area. No one knows the reason morels seem to prefer to pop up around the bases of dead or dying elm, but that is not a hard and fast rule.

Morels like moist ground, so some recent rain is a good thing. Then, when the thermometer passes 60 degrees for three or four consecutive days, and it doesn't drop below 40 at night, it is time for morel magic.

No hunting license is needed for morels, but you must steer clear of any areas declared to be nature preserves. If you venture out on other public land, be certain to make sure that there are no restrictions regarding Keli Coleman was a familiar sight on Carmel's track and field team, qualifying for state in three individual events in 2005. Coleman is continuing to ride that momentum into her freshman season at Augustana College.

Coleman has posted a time

under the NCAA Division III provisional mark in two individual events and a relay, her biggest highlight coming in the 100-meter dash

Charlie Corr

at the College Conference of Illinois and Wisconsin Championships on May 5 and

The Carmel grad won the 100 with a time of 12.21 seconds as the Vikings took second in the conference behind North Central College.

"It was not my best time, but it was pretty exciting," Coleman said. "We were really excited about that second-place finish, setting a few new school records."

Coleman added a fourthplace run in the 200, posting a time of 25.33 (under the provisional time of 25.36).

Relays have been one of Augustana's strong suits this season. Coleman ran anchor for the first-place 400 relay team at the CCIW Championships, beating the provisional mark by 0.66 seconds.

"I enjoy the individual events, but it's been fun with the girls. We have good chemistry," Coleman said.

Also this season, Coleman participated on Augustana's first-place 800 relay team at the Drake Relays in Des Moines, Iowa. The Vikings ran a time of 1:43.79, breaking the previous school record of 1:44.14.

The Vikings certainly value Coleman's contributions. After all, Coleman said she had opportunities to run track for several Division I institutions.

"I had a lot of offers for D-I, but I liked Augustana's science program, and it is a smaller school," Coleman said. "I'm happy with my choice."

 Mundelein High School alum Tyler Wollberg capped off his debut season with Carthage's men's golf team in style.

Wollberg earned All-CCIW honors and was the medalist at the CCIW Men's Golf Championship. He shot a twoday 146 (71-75) on April 28 and 29. He is Carthage's first conference medalist since Jason Langwell in 1996.

"Wollberg is just so consistent at keeping the ball in play and making good, heady decisions," Carthage coach Dave Roehl said in a release. "He's a very intelligent player, and he has good command of the trajectory of the ball."

Though Carthage also won the conference title, the Redmen did not receive an NCAA bid.

• Two area men's tennis players saw an abbreviated NCAA Tournament on May 12 and 13.

On May 12, No. 7 Illinois shut out Western Illinois, 4-0. Grayslake alum Nate Lesinski and teammate Justin Junck dropped an 8-2 match at No. 2 doubles.

Lesinski's No. 4 singles match was suspended. After falling in the first set, 6-3, Lesinski was leading, 4-3, in the second set against Illinois' Pramod Dabir.

On May 13, No. 6 Ohio State blanked Butler, 4-0. Carmel alum and Libertyville native Parker Ross and teammate Brandon Gill fell at No. 1 doubles, 8-4, and Gill lost a 6-1. 6-1 match at No. 3 singles.

Western Illinois finished the season with a 14-8 record and Butler compiled a 14-10 mark.

the removal of plant matter from the site.

If you decide to hit the woods and seek out the elusive morel, dress appropriately, bring something sharp to cut the 'shrooms at their base and bring a mesh bag to tote them home in. A mesh bag allows the captured mushrooms to release their spores into the air, allowing a whole new crop for next year.

Hunting morel mushrooms is no easy task. They are usually tiny and they blend in with the camouflage that Mother Nature provides for them.

Morel hunting is a hearty challenge and can be very frustrating.

When you actually get the hang of hunting morels and can capture a sack, you can cook them fresh or preserve them for later. A simple dredging in milk, and then flour will suffice for a coating. Then, just fry these babies in butter until the flour coating turns golden brown. You will then experience a taste treat like no other.

In order to preserve your morels, fry them very quickly, let them cool and then freeze them in a plastic bag. When you want to use them, defrost and finish the frying.

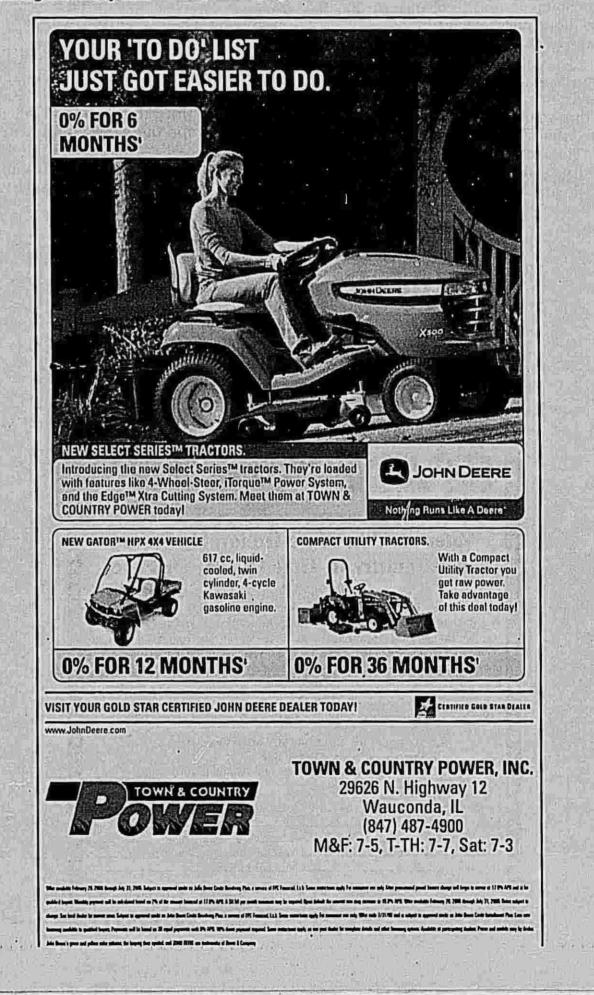

If you are afraid of accidentally finding a poisonous fungus, there are plenty of identification books and videos available.

There also is a Web site, www.morelmania.com, that is a great jumping-off point.

Once you've hunted morels, you'll be hooked. Once you taste them, you may become one of those mushroom maniacs who travel from state to state in search of this elusive creature. It's a short season, and it only comes once a year, so get out there right away!

Lakes softball clips Libertyville, 1-0

"I love the pressure," Seaver said. "That's how I like to pitch because it's more fun that way. I don't think my coach likes this type of game, but I love it."

Too little, too late

Hoyer already has made significant progress with the Wildcat program. The team has already surpassed the 2005 win total (8-22) by three wins with more contests left on the schedule.

In addition to statistical gains, Libertyville is no longer losing games by large margins. Instead, the Wildcats are dropping games by frustratingly small numbers - as evidenced by their 1-0 loss to Lakes last Monday.

In the top of the seventh, Libertyville rallied to put two runners in scoring position against the Eagles. Unfortunately, the Wildcats were unable to capitalize on the chance, losing the game by the smallest of margins.

"It was too little too late, we can't seem to start rallies until we've already dug a hole that's too deep," Hoyer said. "The same thing happened to us at Antioch and a lot of other games this year. Unlike last year, we're not dropping games by big margins, instead, we're just this close to taking the victory."

Moral victories are getting a little old for the coach and her Wildcats, but the tight scores should provide the team with evidence of their growth. With the IHSA tournament just around the corner, Hoyer hopes she can give the opposition some growing pains of their own.

"We're in every game; the kids should be very proud of that," Hoyer said. "Now if we could just put it all together, because this is the time to do it."

Advancing the cause

Pitchers rarely get the chance to make a difference in their own game in the batter's box, but Seaver helped to secure her own victory by notching two of her team's three hits. While it was the heads-up base running of Eagle Nora Kenney coupled with Jenny Ignoffo's big RBI double that accounted for the game's one and only run, Sexton was pleased with Seaver's

"After we go three up, three down in the first two innings, she comes in and gets us going with a nice, hard single," Sexton said. "Claire started us off nicely with her bat and that eventually led to our big run."

On Libertyville's end, the Wildcats were able to put two runners in scoring position thanks to a single by Emily Field. Field was advanced to third thanks to a double by Kari Guarnaccio for the game's only extra base

The win advanced Lakes to 7-16 on the season while dropping the Wildcats to 11-17.

Warren boys capture first track title

By STEVE PETERSON

WAUCONDA - After all, what's a few days, anyway?

Warren High School's boys track team has been waiting for more than 20 years to claim the title that it came away with on a cloudy, but happy, Monday, becoming North Suburban Conference Champions.

The Blue Devils' steady performance overpowered Lake Zurich, 81-75, for first place in the rain-delayed meet at Wauconda High School. Libertyville took third with 70 points.

The meet originally was scheduled for last Thursday, but did not take place until four days later. The rain delay proved to be quite trying on all the athletes.

"It was tough waiting, to come out here Thursday and Friday and not race. It destroyed confidence," Warren sprinter Ray Varner said. "You try and get into a zone and focus on the next meet."

Despite the weather troubles, Varner accounted for 30 of Warren's 81 points. He won the 200 in 22 seconds flat, took first in the 110-meter hurdles in 14.1 and won the 300 hurdles in 38.5. Warren also went 2-3 in the triple jump, with Marcus Lewis and John Boddie, respectively.

"It was the little things, and people really came through," WTHS coach Bill Dawson said. "We said in February that we wanted to run our best at this time on the track this time of year, and we did."

While his sprinter turned out to be the principle Blue Devil threat, Dawson credited his other athletes with the big win.

"Varner had a nice meet, but he put 30 points up. But the other guys had 51 other points," Dawson said. "Everyone contributed. We ran our 4x4, even though we were fifth, we ran 3 seconds better than our fastest time of the year."

Dawson also credited the 4x800 team, made up of Karsen Green Cesar Garza, Chris Burns and Paul Pinowski, in addition to his triple jumpers, who turned in a 1-3 finish with Lewis and Boddie.

Varner certainly had his competition as he battled Lake Zurich's Justin Lohman to win the 200 in 22.0, winning by 0.05 seconds. Varner also beat Wauconda's Kris Gehrke in the 300-meter hurdles, after being edged by him in the110-meter hurdles.

Brad Fortney of Antioch also was happy, winning the shot put with a throw of 52-10.5, beating Mark Saran of Lake Forest, edg-51-05.75 his ing Libertyville's Terry Nicco. Fortney is a team captain and takes that role seriously with the Sequoits.

"I like to push the other throwers. We have a young team of throwers, not many seniors, so it is up to me and Kurt Schultz," Fortney said.

Schultz took a solid fourth in the discus.

Mother's Day weekend and Mother Nature's wrath

There's nothing worse in life than forgetting important holidays. Whether it's anniversaries, birthdays and Mother's

Daniel J. Patrick

Day that can do the most forgetful of us in.

Judging by the weather last weekend, somebody obviously forgot to send Mother Nature her card and flowers.

Crunch time is now upon us in the spring sports arena with playoffs and conference tournaments taking place. The North Suburban Conference boys tennis tournament was rescheduled not once, not twice, but thrice.

It's hard enough for sports reporters, parents and other spectators to have to shift around our schedules with cancellations, but for the athletes, it's sheer hell.

Ratcheting up for a game and trying to bring yourself back down in short order is never easy on the nerves. Playing in the cold and rain is never fun, but ask most any outdoor athlete - sometimes it's just better to go out and play the game.

Those brave enough to battle the elements put on a show, as every game over the weekend was a classic. Grayslake's baseball game was a nail-biter in the wicked mix of gusting winds and rain as they won 3-2 over Cary-Grove. While inclement weather is a given in soccer, last weekend also brought its fair share of good games with Mundelein winning over Lakes 3-1 while Warren beat Vernon Hills by the same close score.

But the big story here is in the track and field arena. The girls put themselves through torrential downpours and high winds for the IHSA tournament last Thursday as Grant snapped a string of 11 straight Lake Forest sectional titles in Vernon Hills.

Resident Bulldog throwing superstars Cora Caulfield and Bailey Wagner once again put on a show, finishing 1-2 in both the shot and the discus. Interestingly enough, it was the sophomore Wagner who won out over the senior Caulfield in the sectional.

Wagner threw for 41 feet 10 inches in the shot, good enough for top honors amongst the state qualifiers in Illinois. Palatine's Jenise Sterling was the closest finisher in sectional competition with a throw one full foot shorter than Wagner's heave. If the season ended today, Wagner would again medal in the state discus finals as she notched the third longest throw in Class AA competition.

Grant could face its biggest field challenge in the disc as Wagner and Caulfield will have to lock horns with Peoria-Richwoods' senior Jewel Sanders, who notched a 141-foot-6-inch throw in the Bloomington Sectional while . Belleville West's Stephanie Smith threw 139'4" in the East St. Louis Sectional. Compared with Wagner (130') and Caulfield, (121'3") our two hometown heroes might have a little work to do before the finals.

No matter the results, just making it to the state finals is quite the accomplishment. As for any competition between the duo, if you were to ask the two of them, the response would be simple: It doesn't matter who took the final bow, so long as they both advanced to the next level.

"On the varsity team, we're always competing; it was me and [Danielle] Eiler last year, and this year, it's me and Bailey," Caulfield said. "It's good because it gives you this drive because you want to inch them out...but we're still teammates."

As for Mother Nature, I think it would be best if we did more than just send a card next year.

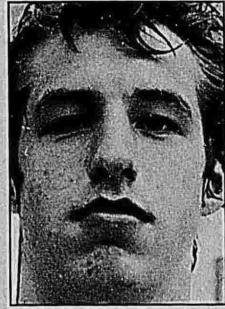

Athletes of the Week

BAILEY WAGNER

Apparently, Grant sophomore thrower Bailey Wagner is no longer satisfied with being superstar teammate Cora Caulfield's understudy. The duo rocked the competition by finishing 1-2 in the Vernon Hills sectional, but it was the youngster who took top honors in both.

ANDREW PETERSON

Mundelein's water polo team capped off another successful season, winning fourth in the state for two years in a row. Andrew Peterson was a major piece of the Mustang win over Loyola, scoring four goals in the team's big 10-8 win in the state semifinal.

CLAIRE SEAVER

Eagles junior Claire Seaver pitched a gem against the Libertyville Wildcats, throwing a complete-game 1-0 shutout, giving up just two hits, no walks while fanning four. The story doesn't end on the mound as Seaver finished 2-for-2, notching Lakes' first hit that eventually led to the game's only run.

Making small seem big & tall on a budget

Many people, especially those living in big cities or young people just starting out, realize early on that space comes at a premium. Whether you're fresh out of college and need to stretch your paycheck or living in a big city with big city prices, living in a small apartment doesn't necessarily mean you need to be cramped all the time. The following tips should help you make any small space seem more spread out.

· Brighten up the room. If you're allowed to paint the walls, by all means do it. While darker colors are more popular, using bright colors to paint the walls makes a room appear more spacious. Multi-colored or patterned walls often cause the eyes to pause a lot, making a room seem smaller.

· Keep scale in mind. While it may seem as though putting larger furniture in your room will make it appear smaller, fewer, larger pieces of furniture will make the room appear more open and less cluttered. Whenever possible, keep from putting too much furniture in a you're putting in are small.

· Utilize wall space. A big concern for many living in tight quarters is where to put books. While a bookcase can look nice, it can also take up lots of space. Hang a few shelves on the wall above your desk and put your books there. The easy accessibility will still be there but now small area, even if the items you'll have more floor space as well.

> · Use mirrors or paintings that feature depth. Mirrors or paintings that feature lots of depth can make a room appear larger than it really is. While these are certainly optical illusions, they serve a great purpose when attempting to make a small space seem less cramped.

How to use 'Green' materials at home

Environmentally friendly, or "green," products and practices can make your home healthier and more comfortable. But how do you incorporate green materials into your home?

 Local building materials. One of the simplest ways to go green is to look for building materials that are indigenous to your area. For instance, use stone that is quarried locally.

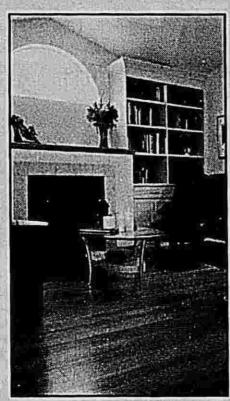

· Bamboo and natural cork flooring. These renewable, fast-growing woods are longlasting and naturally termiteresistant. They come in many different styles and colors.

· Natural fabrics and carpets. Fabrics with natural fibers and natural dyes, such as undyed cotton and natural hemp, won't off-gas - in other words, they won't release toxic gases that can affect indoor air quality.

 Non-toxic paints, stains, sealants and glues. Look for products that are low in volatile organic compounds, or VOCs. Check a product's label for VOC information.

 Energy-efficient lighting. The use of low-voltage lights and newly developed fluorescent lights can help reduce energy use.

· Energy Star appliances. When replacing washers, dryers, refrigerators and dishwashers, look for products with the Energy Star label, which use less energy and help reduce energy costs.

One environmentally friendly and aesthetically appealing home improvement option is to install bamboo flooring.

These are relatively simple improvements, but there are more complex improvements you can make to your home that will yield impressive results. -For instance, you can heat your water using a solar energy system, install energyefficient windows, upgrade your home's insulation, and choose roofing, siding or decking products made from composite or recycled materials.

Free ATTENTION PET OWNERS We Do Not

Knowingly Accept Ads For Free/Giveaway Animals

If you must give up your beloved pet, please consider these suggestions,

*Free animal ads suggest that there is something wrong with the animal, or that it has no value.

*Some people who respond to these free animal ads are imposters and are only concerned about making a profit and not the animal's welfare. *Charging a fee to a potential pet owner confirms the responsibility of pet ownership for an entire lifetime of that pet. For more information, please contact the Humane Society.

CURFEW

Save-A-Pet 31664 N, Fairfield Rd., Grayslake, IL 60030 847-740-7788, ext. 100 www.save-a-pet-il.org

Adoption Hours: Mon., Tues., Wed., Fri.: 1pm to 5pm Thursday: 1pm to 8pm Sat. & Sun. 11am to 6pm

Breaking Curlew? We doubt it, maybe a sad set of circumstances might have resulted in him getting lost as he seems to know all his basic commands and is so wellmannered. Unfortunately no one came looking for him. So when his time was up, volunteers at that shelter pleaded his case so well that Save-A-Pet took him in. This gentle giant is happiest when he gets to spend time with people and never strays very far from them.

A visit to an orthopedic surgeon revealed that he has significant arthritis in both of his elbows, most likely a chronic problem from birth. As if this wasn't enough, it was also discovered that his left pelvis and hip have old healed fractures. And no, we are not done yet, his right knee has an old ligament tear with significant arthritis. Surgery is not recommended at this time. However the surgeon cannot say whether additional problems in the future might necessitate surgery. He is currently on glucosamine and needs to be on it for life. Curfew doesn't want to have to stay here any longer and can't wait to find his new family. So hurry in this weekend!~

Great Non-Employment Books (That Relate to Employment)

By

Scott T. Fleischmann

Ulike to play golf. About twenty-five years ago a friend told me about his favorite book on golf. It was (not so) aptly titled "The Inner Game of Tennis" (W. Timothy Gallwey, New York: Bantam Books,

The book was about the discipline required to play sports well. The concept is that athletes in most sports train more than they compete. As they practice, "muscle memory" is created. No, muscles do not really have a memory. However, when a repetitive physical action is taken the subconscious mind reminds the muscles how to react in a given competitive situation. This is called muscle memory.

I learned three lessons from this book. First, I learned that I needed to practice golf more and play less. This was a disappointment since I enjoy playing more than I enjoy practice. Then I learned to learn from unrelated sources. In other words, I could learn about golf from a book on tennis. Finally, as a business manager I learned to practice making disciplined decisions in every aspect of my life so that when I needed to make a decision in another area of my life I would have the "muscle memory" to do it.

Since then, I have learned many great employment lessons from nurelated sources. Here are some of the best.

Yogi Berra is my favorite philosopher. Most people see him as a Hall of Fame catcher and baseball manager who has significant trouble with the English language. The best of his pith is documented in "I Really Didn't Say Everything I Said" (New York: Workman Publishing 1998). The title is an attempt to say that he has been misquoted. Questioning how to get more people to watch live baseball during an attendance slump he asked, "If people don't want to come to the ballpark, how are you going to stop them?"

These are only two of the many statements made by Berra and his family members. It is a quick read—an inexpensive page-turner worth keeping in your library. Each quotation is thoroughly explained, and it is obvious that everyone understood the point he was trying to make. It taught me that it is sometimes useful to make statement in obvious or confused terms.

From a book on discipleship, I learned that nothing of worth is easily gained. Dietrich Bonhoeffer's classic "The Cost of Discipleship" was translated into English in 1937, four years after Hitler came to power. As one of the first to protest Nation Socialism in Germany, he stood up to severe political pressure, even as he continued to teach systematic theology at Berlin University.

He was expelled from the University because of his position against se who were in power, and in 1939, friends coerced him to come to the United States until his life was no longer in jeopardy. He stayed only a few days because he felt compelled to openly oppose the atrocities that were being committed in Germany. He was executed at the Flossenburg concentration camp under the direct order of Himmler on April 9, 1945, just days before the Allies liberated the

The book is a Christian classic. However, for those who are not believers, the philosophy in this book is every bit as useful. Learning to identify and fight for the most important issues—in religion, in employment and in life—makes us stronger as individuals and benefits society.

Add window vents to your vehicle for looks, function

Warm, sunny summer days are perfect for many things, but they can make the inside of your car feel like it's 200 degrees. If you can find a shady parking spot, that helps, but a more realistic solution is to add window vents to your car.

Not only do window vents add a sporty custom look to your car, SUV, truck or van, but they're practical, too. Because the vents create an "eave" for your vehicle's window, you can leave the window open a crack in the summer to let in fresh air without worrying about a sudden thunderstorm. While you're on the road, a window vent can decrease wind noise for a more pleasant driving experience.

AVS, a brand name known for its quality line of car customizing accessories, offers two window vent styles that you can install yourself. The original Ventvisor installs easily with strong 3M tape to the exterior of your car. The AVS In-Channel Ventvisor installs inside the window channel, giving your car a sleek, streamlined appearance. An added bonus is that no exterior tape touches the vehicle's paint.

Made from heavy-duty acrylic, the window vents can be painted to match your car, or you can choose to use them as is, in a stylish smoke tint. Window vents are available for both the front and rear doors.

"We introduced this practical and durable accessory 70 years ago, and it is one of our most popular items," says AVS spokesperson Jay Lusignan. Hundreds of custom applications are available, including many older models.

In addition to window vents, AVS offers a variety of ways to improve both the functionality and the look of your vehicle. From hood shields to hood scoops and door sill protectors to light covers, you can find everything you need to customize your ride.

So this summer, spend your days enjoying the weather - both outside and in your car.

For more information on AVS products, visit www.lund-international.com.

The treasure's of King Tutankhamen's mummy will be on display at Chicago's Field Museum.

King Tut decoded

(1) Crook and flail: The flail, likely a fly whisk, symbolizes royalty. Shepherds clutch crooks. Together, the objects could represent power and responsibility: the might and potential wrath of the flail, and the guidance of the crook. Osiris, primordial king of Egypt and ruler of the dead, also holds the crook and flail.

(2) False beard: Dr. Michelle Paluch-Mishur, art historian and lecturer, said Egyptians donned this as part of their cereimonial regalia. She likened the adornment to a necktie. The beard consists of linen stiffened with plaster. In this case, it also is inlaid with gold. The wearer attached it to their face with leather straps that fastened around the ears. Here, the beard attaches to the cartonage, or plaster mask stiffened with plaster and gilded. The curve at the tip signifies death and unity with Osiris, god of the dead, who artists often rendered with a curved false beard.

(3) A uraeus and vulture: The funeral party would wrap these objects in a wreath to guard the brow. The uraeus represents a cobra, associated with the sun god and the kingdom of Lower Egypt, in attack stance. The cobra symbolized protection and Egyptians believed it to guard the gates of the underworld. The vulture stands for Upper Egypt and the goddess Nekhbet, protector of that region and the pharaohs, manifested as the animal.

In line for Conan O'Brien

By KATHY GRESEY

kgresey@nwnewsgroup.com

CHICAGO – It wasn't easy to see the "Late Night with Conan O'Brien" show in Chicago last week.

Not IN the Chicago Theatre, anyway. Just getting in line proved to be a challenge.

But there were a few that did it ... a few that beat the odds and landed a seat in front of the comedic legend.

I was one of those people. And I will never forget the experience. Here is how I became an audience member at the Conan O'Brien show.

The e-mail

A few months back, an announcement was made that the "Late Night with Conan O'Brien" show was coming to Chicago.

This glorious news was well received by many Conan-loving fans. To receive tickets, interested parties had to e-mail their name, address and phone number to an NBC e-mail address.

This process might seem simple enough, but when more than 70,000 emails are sent requesting tickets, odds are that most people will wind up watching Conan on stage from the comfort of their own living rooms.

That was the case for most people I knew. Just sending an e-mail was only part of the process.

You had to receive a reply e-mail stating you received tickets, in order to line up for a chance to get into the historic Chicago Theatre on State Street.

I never received a reply e-mail, and I would be $40 richer if I did. I wound up making a deal with my sister, so that I could use her reply e-mail to gain access to the show.

The plan

Four Late Night shows were taped in Chicago last week. I had tickets to the third.

Guests and musical acts on the first two nights included Sean Hayes, Cheap Trick, Dave Chappelle and Common.

I made sure to watch the first two shows, so that I could gain insider knowledge on what to expect. Conan's "furthest-seat-in-the-theater" bit convinced me I had to get good seats to the show.

To make those good seats reality, my boyfriend, Jason, and I left for the show, by train, at 8:55 a.m.

Instructions stated that no one should line up for the show after 3:15 p.m. We got in line at 10:30 a.m. and were told by ticket distributors that we were about the 350th people to have exchanged their e-mails for Late Night passes.

We were on location at State and Lake streets. All we had to do was wait.

The line

Ordinarily, I am not opposed to waiting in line for any entertaining event. Concerts, amusement park rides – not a big deal.

I actually was looking forward to the line for Conan last Thursday, because I figured everyone would be in a good mood and talkative.

And people were, for the most part, but it was incessantly drizzling and windy, which threw a bit of "survival of the fittest" into the whole thing.

Many people were huddled under umbrellas and ponchos. I was wearing a raincoat with not nearly enough sweaters underneath.

Though I did hear a few random shouts and chants of "Conan" during my 5-hour wait, overall, the line was unexpectedly silent. Conan's Masterbating Bear did make an appearance, which seemed to pump up the crowd.

Those that needed to leave the water-soaked line were permitted to exit, provided that some other soggy individual held their place. Jason and I left the line twice to get food and beverage refreshments.

The end

Getting into the Conan line early proved to be beneficial, because Jason and I landed seats within the first 20 rows.

We had a good view of the stage, and when Conan came on we went crazy along with everyone else.

Guests that afternoon included actor John C. Reilly and musician John Mayer.

At the end of the show, a slew of Conan-head beach balls were thrown into the crowd, and Conan shook hands with those in the front rows.

I had a great time going to see Conan O'Brien, and I would wait in the rain again, if it meant seeing the New York-based funnyman.

Of course, it also is riot – and much drier – to see him on the television in your living room.

Mysterious splendor of Ancient Egypt

Chicago's Field Museum exhibit showcases 18th Dynasty

By EMILY PREVITI

epreviti@nwnewsgroup.com

GURNEE - Floridians flocked to the Museum of Art in Fort Lauderdale to see the "King of Bling."

The Los Angeles County Museum of Art offered $1 million in attempt to attract even more glitz, perhaps to outshine the starlets that strut Sunset Strip.

Starting May 26, residents of the Chicago area also will have the opportunity to view turquoise, carnelian, quartz and gold fit for royalty. The jewels, stones and precious metals will adorn more than 130 artifacts that "Tutankhamun and the Golden Age of the Pharaohs" and "Inside Ancient Egypt" exhibitions (see "Check it out") will feature.

The exhibit allows Egypt's 18th Dynasty to transcend time and place with its overview of the royal family and the period's politics and religion.

Dr. Michelle Paluch-Mishur, who holds a Ph.D. in art history, said the exhibit would contextualize King Tutankhamun, a figure shrouded in mystery and definitive of royalty.

Paluch-Mishur co-owns Art Excursions, which provides slide lectures on art, architecture, sculpture, culture, history and exhibits for clubs, libraries, businesses and other organizations.

She said the current exhibit contains about double the number of artificats in the 1977 tour of King Tut's tomb contents. About 80 objects in this exhibit relate to Tut's family members and trace lineage, Paluch-Mishur said.

The scope has expanded and thus increased the comprehensiveness of the current exhibit as compared to the past one, she said.

In this spirit, supplemental information (see "Read up") to the exhibit will provide visitors, as well as those who do not go, with Tut's family tree and a history of Egypt's 18th Dynasty (1321 to 1292 BC).

Paluch-Mishur, who lectured at the Warren-Newport Public Library in Gurnee on May 10, said that tragedy sparked the exhibit's tour. In November of 1997, terrorists attacked an Egyptian temple, and the resultant drop in tourism dented Egypt's economy.

Two-thirds of civilians killed in the attack hailed from Switzerland. Five years later, officials approached the Egyptian Supreme Council of Antiquities and sug-

If you can't make it to the exhibit, but want to learn more, check out books by Dr. Zahi Hawass. gested sending the exhibit on the road as a way to facilitate healing and revive interest in travel to Egypt.

"The deal was sweetened to the tune of $5 million," Paluch-Mishur said.

David Foster, of Chicago's Field Museum, said two other reasons dominated the push for Egypt to lift the ban on travel for the relics instated in 1981.

To start. Egypt has increased its activity in the international loans and exhibitions community, as have other developing countries like China and Russia, he said.

Contracts precluded him from discussion of the estimated revenue from the tour. Funds would go toward construction of a new museum in Egypt, though.

Foster said the new museum, the Grand Egyptian Museum, would reside outside of the pyramids of Giza.

He described the Egyptian Museum, in Cairo, as "outdated" and "antiquated."

Foster explained the Grand Egyptian Museum would allow Egypt to have an updated flagship museum.

Contracts prevented Foster from disclosure of the exhibit's value.

"It's rare for a lending museum or country would disseminate the information," he said.

Rigorous insurance policies, divided travel and "painstaking" shipping and display practices, protect the artifacts, he said.

Packers sculpt foam around objects before they crate them; large pieces, however, hang by strings inside of the crates.

The crates then fly to their destination in two shipments to ensure the safety of half of the exhibit, should the other half become lost or damaged.

He also said climate control is required in shipment. HVAC (heating, ventilation and air conditioning) systems control the climate within the shipping containers.

Temperature and humidity remain at specified levels in the rooms and galleries of display.

Conditions required for preservation differs between materials (wood, ivory, gold, stone) that comprise the artifacts, so the specific exhibit cases may also have their own climate control system.

The tour schedule is as follows: Basel, Switzerland; Bonn, Germany: Los Angeles, Fort Lauderdale, Fla., Chicago and Philadelphia in the U.S.; and London, England.

According to Foster, the tour's European and American phases contain the same objects, but differ in presentation.

Northern Trust sponsors the tour and Exelon sponsors its stop in Chicago.

A walk through history

Organization provides look at life, work of Frank Lloyd Wright

By MATT PERA

mpera@nwnewsgroup.com

The Robie House is not difficult to pick out when driving on Woodlawn Avenue in Chicago's Hyde Park neighborhood.

The look of the residence, which was designed by renowned American architect Frank Lloyd Wright, makes it "stick out like a sore thumb," as Paul Braun put it.

Braun, who is a volunteer interpreter for the Frank Lloyd Wright Preservation Trust, leads guided tours through the home.

He explained that Wright's forward thinking and innovation are exemplified in the Robie House, built on the University of Chicago campus in the architect's Prairie style.

While construction of the home was completed in 1910, Braun said the wide-open floor plan, the multiple windows and the connected garage, among other features, made it appear decidedly more modern than that.

"[Wright] was always fighting the idea of just copying other architecture," Braun said. "The university has a lot of neo-gothic copies of European styles and a lot of the houses are copies of Italian and European styles. And Wright was saying, why are we doing that? We're smart enough, why not come up with something American."

Check it out

For more information on the tours offered by the Frank Lloyd Wright Preservation Trust, visit online at www.wrightplus.org.

Bill Tyre, of the Chicago Society of Architectural Historians, agreed with Braun, saying Wright had worked to develop an entirely unique style.

"There are many examples of other architects in that neighborhood and it provides a nice contrast for the Robie House because a lot of other houses were designs in styles that Frank Lloyd Wright was trying to break away from," Tyre said.

What resulted from the Robie House, and Wright's Prairie style as a whole, was a completely new approach to architecture.

His experimentation with forms and materials made him one of the most significant architects of the 20th century, with the Robie House sitting as one of the crowning jewels of American architecture.

The public will have a variety of opportunities in the coming month to experience that significance firsthand.

Braun and other interpreters lead several daily tours through the Robie House.

On May 20, the Frank Lloyd Wright Preservation Trust will host its Wright Plus tour in Oak Park and River Forest.

The annual event marks the only time during the year that residents of private homes designed by Wright open their doors for walking tours. The Robie House, along with Wright's home and studio in Oak Park, also will be open on May 20 for guided tours.

"If you're a fan of Wright, or architecture in general, it's a major deal," Braun said of the Wright Plus tour, adding that people fly in from all over the world to take part in it.

Those interested in Wright's work will have another chance to view the Robie House on June 10, during the Frank Lloyd Wright Preservation Trust's extensive tour of the and the surrounding Hyde Park neighborhood during its Robie House Neighbors Walk and Wine.

Exterior restoration of the Robie House was completed in 2003 and the Frank Lloyd Preservation Trust now is working to raise about $4 million to restore the interior as well, Finch said.

Lauren Finch, a spokesperson for the trust, said participants of that event will have the chance at the end of the tour to enjoy wine and canapés on a terrace that has not been open to the public in several years.

"We hope people take away from the tour the history of the Robie House and the Hyde Park area," Finch said. "A lot of this is about the experience."

Animals eat to live, humans live to eat

'Over the Hedge' battles a dog-eat-dog world

By PAM & GEORGE O. SINGLETON

The animation team that brought us "Shrek" and "Madagascar" has made another wildly imaginative film that will appeal to both adults and children because of its double entendre dialogue, interesting plot and top-notch look. It's ingenious, thought provoking and best of all, fun.

A group of fuzzy, furry, friendly (except for the bear, of course) forest animals are waking up as their winter hibernation comes to an end.

What's new is that there is a large green hedge that has popped up that is intended to keep them where they belong. This sort of brings to mind the fence proposed to run along

What has changed is that the former forest is now stateof-the-art suburbia, with carefully manicured lawns, mammoth SUVs and people who say they want to get away from it all, but then bring it all with

But it's a dog-eat-dog world (so to speak) in the forest as well. The bear (Nick Nolte) will eat sly RJ the raccoon (Bruce Willis) within 24 hours unless he replaces the bear's stockpiled food that he destroyed.

The turtle, Verne (Garry Shandling), is the guide for their group and he leads the way through many funny situations. Verne saves the day as they venture into the land of suburbia. Stella (Wanda Sykes) the skunk uses her wit to give this PG film a nice edge.

RJ points out a well-worn truism: animals eat to live while humans live to eat. There are plenty of laughs in "Over the Hedge," and some quirky reminders that in today's world, fuel efficiency is nearly a survival strategy, recycling is required and interest in the regard for all living creatures is

Did you know... Waukegan

- Waukegan, first visited by Pere Marquette in 1673, is one of the oldest communities in Illinois. The city started as a French trading post and Potawatomi Indian settlement known as "Little Fort". Records dating back to 1829 tell of a treaty signed by the Potawatomis in which they ceded all of their land in this area to the Federal Government.
- Little Fort became the County Seat of Government in 1841 by virture of its population. Between 1844 and 1846, the town's population grew from 150 to 750 people. In 1849 when the town was incorporated, the population had risen to 2,500.
- Proud of the growth of their community and no longer wanting to be characterized as "little", on March 31, 1849 the residents of Little Fort changed the name of their town to Waukegan, the Potawatomi word for "fort" or "trading post".
- Early settlers were initially attracted to Waukegan as a port city and shipped produce and grain from Lake and McHenry County farms to Chicago. The creation of the Illinois Parallel Railroad (now the Chicago & Northwestern) in 1855 stimulated interest in Waukegan as a manufacturing center. The town continued to grow and diversify, and Waukegan was incorporated as a city on February 23, 1859, with an area of 5.62 square miles.
- Waukegan is commonly referred to as the midpoint between Chicago and Milwaukee, although it is still a part of Chicagoland.

Link Auto Repair does it right the first time

By Gloria Davis

The staff at Link's Auto Repair, owned by Mike Link, located at 556 North Green Bay Rd. in Waukegan since 1997, is not only dedicated to doing things right the first time around, they do their best to complete the job as and when promised.

General Manager Dave Steele has a policy of doing everything necessary to keep car owners happy by giving the best maintenance to one of the most expensive items the average person buys. He believes the best advertising comes by word of mouth from satisfied customers.

"We have no specialty, we just do everything top drawer, from a brake job, to fixing a transmission, cleaning a fuel system, replacing shocks, fixing an air conditioner, a tune-up or any and everything needed to maintain a customer's automobile, keeping it in the best shape possible, while holding our labor costs down, " said Steele.

A Link customer can be confident that the staff does a thorough exam of the car and recommends only the job needed, because Link Auto Repair wants repeat customers, but not because the original repair was incomplete or incorrect. Link wants customers with new problems to return fot he level of expertise they received before.

No job is too small or too big, and no job is more complicated than Link's staff can handle. To keep your automobile operating like a new one, call Link Auto Repair, at (847) 249-3878, from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily and from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Saturday.

The local, all-volunteer organization came to the Waukegan area in 1967 and is now made up of 150 Muslim families living in northern Illinois and southern Wisconsin.

while stressing respect for all religious prophets such as Jesus, Moses, etc.

Sadar also stated that is is the job of the community's members to defend Islam from "Islamaphobia" or the belief that the Muslim religion preaches intolerance and death to members of all other religions. Members also push finding "truth through dialogue."

Sadar reports that members of Ahmadiyya support many other community organizations of their community, working with them in support of scholarships, recreation and sports events for children. The organization, made up of men, women and children, with activities for all and each, is funded by donations, called Chandra, calling for monthly tithing of a percentage of all members' incomes, and funds from the national and international organization.

A recent event sponsored by the Lake County Ahmadiyya Muslim Community was a religion and science symposium in honor of Dr. Stephen Insantino who had a peaceful philosophy and was a good friend of the Lake County community. The winning essay on that philosophy was written by a young lady who attends the College of Lake County.

Massey Insurance guarantees peace of mind

By Gloria Davis

It's a state law that all automobile owners have to have, at least, liability insurance to cover damage costs to another driver in an accident caused by the insured. This requirement can give drivers and car owners same peace of mind, even if they must pay repairs on their own vehicle.

Of course, drivers should also have enough car insurance to cover any loans on their car if the automobile is destroyed or damaged in an accident, and also to replace the car with an automobile of like value if they are responsible for the accident, besides paying for the car or its repair, in case the accident is caused by an uninsured driver who does not have the means to pay for the damages.

Massey Insurance, an established insurance agency that opened in 1971, was purchased by the present owner and operator Gil Zelasko 12 years ago. It offers its customers standard auto insurance, commercial insurance and homeowners insurance at the best rates possible.

Proper insurance coverage to suit every driver's and car owner's needs is offered through the Massey expertise. The right kind of insurance on every kind of commercial endeavor, besides home owners insurance, gauged to cover all losses that might be incurred, means that Massey customers can trust the advice given by an insurance agent at Massey Insurance, where the service is professional, yet extremely personal.

Massey Insurance is located at 2695 Grand Ave., in Waukegan. Insurance consultations are available and claims handled from 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. daily and from 9 a.m. to noon on Wednesday, and from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. on Saturday. Call (849)249-4110 for more information on all your insurance needs.

'Poseidon' treads water

By PAM & GEORGE O. SINGLETON

"Poseidon" is a hoped-for summertime spectacle of a film, buoyed by its special effects and nearly drowned by its sopping dialogue.

Updated from 1972's "The Poseidon Adventure," the magnificent cruise ship sails in open waters on New Year's Eve, and the ballroom is filled with music as everyone waits for the ball to drop at midnight. Suddenly, the Poseidon is hit by a tsunami-like, rare rogue wave that rolls the giant ship about as tons of water crash over the vessel, and it is turned upside down.

Many are killed right away but for the moment at least the grand ballroom, which is now upside down, has been sealed and appears to be safe. The Captain (Andre Braugher) assures people that they are secure here, that the rogue wave has passed and that the ship's GPS will alert rescuers where they are and all will be well.

Kurt Russell and Josh Lucas, both high-stakes gamblers and risk takers, believe that survival depends on climbing out of the ballroom, which will then be resealed, and towards a higher level, which is actually the bottom of the ship, now that the Poseidon has capsized.

They are joined in their death-defying quest by Jacinda Barrett, Jimmy Bennett (who plays Barrett's brave young son), Richard Dreyfus, Emmy Rossum, Mía Maestro, Freddy Rodríguez, and Kevin Dillon.

Overall, the acting is by the numbers. Even though Braugher (TV's "Thief") had limited time in the film, his genius in acting came through with just a blink of the eye and a smile.

The movie is saved from the undertow of lame dialog by three positives.

To see the special effects on the IMAX screen has a special effect of its own. A running time of under 100 minutes is perfect for a high-action picture with a thin plot. And Wolfgang Peterson (who did the master-piece submarine movie "Das Boot") knows how to make a film in tight spaces, under water.

The Da Vinci Code (PG-13):
From director Ron Howard, producer Brian Grazer and screenwriter Akiva Goldsman, the Oscar-winning team of "A Beautiful Mind," comes the film version of Dan Brown's
"The Da Vinci Code," one of the most popular and talked about novels of our time.

The stellar cast is headed by two-time Academy Award® winner Tom Hanks, and features Audrey Tautou, Sir Ian McKellen, Alfred Molina, Jürgen Prochnow, Paul Bettany and Jean Reno. "The Da Vinci Code" involves a thrilling murder investigation that unearths a secret that could change the course of history.

The Producers (PG-13): Mel Brooks' 1968 Hollywood farce about losing and winning on Broadway gets a shiny new face in director Susan Stroman's big screen version of the smash hit revival.

From its sell-out Chicago stage premiere in 2001, this fresh, funny reincarnation of Brooks' classic, starring Nathan Lane, Matthew Broderick and Uma Thurman, hits the mark and then some in a sure crowd-pleaser.

Duma (PG): In South Africa, a boy brings home an orphaned cheetah (Duma) as a pet, and soon realizes that the animal must be returned to the wild.

Something New (PG-13): A romantic comedy, starring Sanaa Lathan and Simon Baker as an interracial couple who faces her family's class bias as well. She's a high-powered accountant and he's a landscaper.

'Sisters' carries passionate delivery

By PAM & GEORGE O. SINGLETON

The Sisters opens as the ever-at-odds Prior sisters, Marcia (Maria Bello) and Olga (Mary Stuart Masterson), prepare for a surprise birthday party for their youngest sister Irene (Erika Christensen).

The setting is in a beautiful private room of the library at a prestigious New England college. Irene is an adult woman, but Marcia and Olga have a maternal connection to her, not only because both parents are deceased, but also because they've had a blind eye toward the abuse their father inflicted upon Marcia.

Though the traumatic events are not discussed directly, the verbal parrying pokes fresh wounds on a regular basis. There are damaged psyches all around.

Marcia is married to a psychiatrist and it seems that no matter what happens in her life, she will never be satisfied. When a man named Vincent (Tony Goldwyn) arrives out of the family's past in Charleston, the extent of Marcia's dissatisfaction becomes apparent.

Olga has a prominent position on campus, yet her repressed sexuality has her, at best, happy on the outside and miserable on the inside. Irene has had numerous bouts with substance abuse and may be permanently coming out of her haze in part because of her relationship with blue-blood fiancé David (Chris O'Donnell).

We learn just how fragile she is when the obviously jealous, and malevolent assistant professor Gary (Eric McCormack) saves her life. There is a brother in this dysfunctional mix. Andrew (Alessandro Nivola) and his pregnant, sexpot wife Nancy (Elizabeth Banks), complete with Brooklyn accent and attitude, bring out everyone's fangs.

Dr. Chebrin (Rip Torn), who was a friend of their father's, acts as a surrogate father to the battling siblings and tries to help each occasionally to see the others' viewpoint.

Bello is magnificent,
Masterson does a wonderful job as the closed-off Olga and Torn brings his usual unique turn to his character. Eric McCormack chewed the scenery a bit, but his passion has an explosive payoff.

'Guitar Hero' strung to perfection

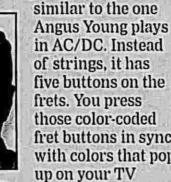

Random adults kept telling me how great "Guitar Hero" is. It's not that I doubted them. Well, maybe I doubted them a little.

Everyone also says great things about "American Idol," and that thing is as exciting as static cling. But wouldn't you know it? "Guitar Hero" is the most fun interactive video game I've ever played.

I confess to being months' late in reviewing "Guitar Hero." Once a year, I try to catch up on a game that has earned good word of mouth, and that fell through the cracks of my Game Dork research labs.

This year, that game is "Hero," which is pure entertainment.

The PlayStation 2 game comes with a mini-guitar, a replica Gibson SG

Doug Elfman

frets. You press those color-coded fret buttons in sync with colors that pop up on your TV screen, and that makes the guitar parts of a song ring clear.

There are 47 songs to learn, rockers like "Iron Man" and "Ace of Spades," and more current hits. The astonishing thing is it makes me want to play a real musical instrument more than being a rock critic did. I would be playing along to Franz Ferdinand's "Take Me Out" and Queens of the Stone Age's "No One Knows," and I want to break out my old instruments.

To be clear, no one is going to learn how to play real guitar in "Hero." But there is musical genuineness in the game. It reminds me of how violinists who learn music appreciation via the Suzuki method get better at counting rhythm, without learning sheet music.

Duo records farm life in northern Illinois

By TARA CLIFTON

tclifton@nwnewsgroup.com

For over a year, Nancy Schumm-Burgess and Ernest J. Schweit have been driving. They search countrysides and farmlands for the fading remnants of America's past - barns.

They are on a hunt to document the stories of barns and their history in rural America in an upcoming book.

Schumm-Burgess writes the essays, Schweit takes the photographs. Both of them have a passion for history.

Schweit said the project will result in a coffee table book, full of bright pictures and tales of life on the farm.

"I think it's an important part of our historical past," Schumm-Burgess "It symbolizes everything said. Americana."

Schumm-Burgess is a member of numerous historical preservation societies, including the National Barn Alliance, and has written such other books as "Long Grove: Images of America" and "The Barns of Lake County."

Schumm-Burgess and Schweit are looking for farmlands within 2 or 3 hours of where they live, Buffalo Grove and Wheeling, respectively.

Americans' lessening dependence upon small barns reflects society's shift to busier, more big-business-driven times. Schweit said.

"They just hearken back to a simpler time," Schweit said. "It kind of makes me sad because it's another reminder of how far we've come, but also of what we've left behind."

If anyone has a barn and story to share, Schumm-Burgess can be reached at (847) 821-0344 (e-mail: nburg719 @aol.com), and Schweit at (847) 465-6070 (e-mail: ernestjschweit@sbcglobal.net).

Invisible fences not as safe as they seem

Don't kid yourself if you think invisible fences are safe; they are not.

They are a great way for your dog to go outside and run around off leash. But make no mistake; there are precautionary steps invisible fence owners should take.

Never leave your dog outside alone by an invisible fence. Your dog isn't safe from anyone or anything getting in your yard. Coyotes and stray dogs are living among us and would not hesitate to hurt a dog.

There also are people out there that would steal a dog for many cruel reasons. Also, if your dog is not friendly with other dogs, be sure you have your eyes on your dog at all times.

Not long ago, I was at a client's home, training a dog. I was told an alarming story that drives my point

One of the client's neighbors has a mastiff that wanders the yard during the day, unsupervised behind an invisible fence. One day a different neighbor opened the front door to let someone in, and the neighbor's terrier dog escaped.

Sandy Kamen Wisniewski

Within seconds the terrier was running into the mastiff's yard and that was the last of the little terrier - the mastiff killed him. That was both tragic and completely preventable.

Another problem with the invisible fence is those dogs take the shock and run through it.

A while back, I was working with clients who said their dog was becoming aggressive outside in the front yard when people would go past. The dog would bark and growl, scaring the neighborhood kids. The dog had a very small yard and the sidewalk butted right up to the tiny yard allowing pedestrians to walk extremely close to the dog's territory.

He knew anyone could get to him, but he couldn't escape so he appeared aggressive. Frankly, he was scared, thus protecting himself. The owners stopped leaving him alone outside, and the behavior improved.

It is illogical for me to say that no one should have an invisible fence. There is nothing like being able to play fetch with your dog, allow them to run free and share the joys of the beautiful outdoors together.

But that's the key: Together.

Szechuan salad has wide appeal

By TOM WITOM thomaswitom@yahoo.com

Janice Cook Knight, former head chef at Follow Your Heart, the oldest vegetarian restaurant in Southern California, describes Szechuan Noodle Salad as a dish that "looks as good as it tastes."

That's a good endorsement.
Another recipe she includes in "Follow Your Heart Cookbook" (Wiley) is for Cream of Broccoli Soup, one of the most popular dishes at the restaurant, which was founded in 1970. All together, Knight has culled 140 health-conscious dishes made without meat, poultry, fish or eggs.

The lacto-vegetarian recipes may include dairy products and honey. A useful food glossary completes the book.

Szechuan Noodle Salad

(Makes 4 servings)

1 8-ounce package udon noodles, preferably all wheat (available at natural food stores and Asian groceries)

1/3 cup Vegenaise or mayonnaise 2 tablespoons tamari soy sauce

11/2 tablespoons hot pepper sesame oil

1 tablespoon freshly grated peeled ginger

2 tablespoons brown rice vinegar 2 large cloves garlic, minced (1 1/2 teaspoons)

1/2 teaspoon crushed red chiles 1 carrot thinly cut on the diagonal 1 medium zucchini cut into thin sticks about 2 in. long

4 ounces fresh sugar snap peas, stemmed, halved if large 1/4 cup chopped green onions

1/4 cup chopped fresh cilantro 1 tablespoon raw sesame seeds 7 or 8 ounces seasoned spicy or

teriyaki tofu (optional)

Bring 3 quarts unsalted water to a boil. Add noodles and cook, uncovered, over medium heat, until noodles are al dente, 7 or 8 minutes. Immediately drain, then rinse noodles in cold water; drain again thoroughly. Cover and set aside.

Mix together the Vegenaise or mayonnaise, tamari, sesame oil, ginger, vinegar, garlic and chiles and set aside. Steam the carrot, zucchini and snow peas separately for a few minutes each, just until each vegetable is tender, but still brightly colored.

Cool and then toss with the sauce, noodles, onions, cilantro and sesame seeds. If using tofu, slice into thin strips and toss gently into salad. Serve cold or at room temperature. (This keeps well, refrigerated, for a couple of days.)

Cream of Broccoli Soup

(Makes 4-6 servings)

1 bunch broccoli (about 2 pounds) 6 cups vegetable stock

1 large potato, peeled and chopped (about 11/2 cups)

1 large stalk celery, chopped 1 medium leek, thinly sliced (1 cup)

1 small bay leaf 1 cup half-and-half

Sea salt

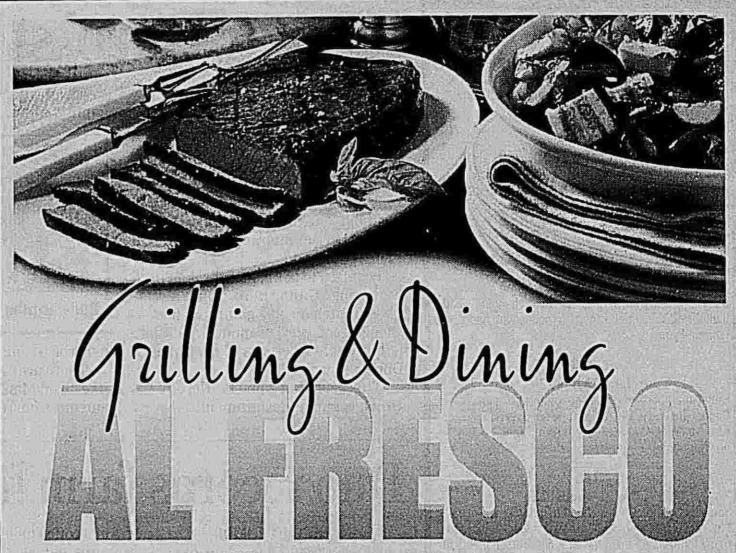

Freshly ground black pepper Chopped fresh chives

Cut the stems off the broccoli and cut them into small pieces. Break the tops of the broccoli into small florets and set aside.

In a 4-quart saucepan, combine the stock, broccoli stems, potato, celery, leek and bay leaf. Bring to a boil, reduce heat, cover partially and simmer steadily for about 35 minutes until the vegetables are very tender. Remove the bay leaf.

Add the broccoli florets and continue cooking about 10 minutes, or until florets are just tender. Add halfand-half. Season with salt and pepper and adjust seasonings to taste. Serve, garnished with chopped chives.

Variation: You also may puree the soup if you like a smooth texture. Or puree just half of it and mix it back in with the rest. If you do this, let mixture cool slightly before pureeing.

here's something irresistible about cooking and eating outdoors. Fresh air, lively conversation, beef sizzling on the grill and great wine all add up to pure enjoyment.

Think about the smoky flavor of grilled steak, paired with a crisp green salad. Add crusty bread with olive oil for dipping and the meal is no-fuss, delicious and totally satisfying. Pour favorite wines and it's time to dine.

Keep dessert simple and seasonal. Marinate fresh fruits and berries in a dessert wine such as moscato and chill before serving. It's al fresco perfect!

Italian Mariantal Charle

Italian Marinated Steak With Grilled Ratatouille

(Makes 6 servings)

Total preparation and cooking time: 45 to 50 minutes Marinating time: 6 hours or overnight

1 beef top round steak, cut 1 inch thick (about 1-1/2

1 small eggplant, cut crosswise into 1/2-inch thick slices 2 large red or yellow bell peppers, cut lengthwise into

1 medium zucchini, cut lengthwise in half

1 medium yellow squash, cut lengthwise in half

1-1/2 cups chopped fresh tomatoes

1/3 cup lightly packed chopped fresh basil Salt and ground black pepper

Marinade:

1/2 cup Colavita Extra Virgin Olive Oil

1/2 cup Sutter Home Sauvignon Blanc

3 tablespoons fresh lemon juice

4 cloves garlic, minced

1/2 teaspoon salt

1/4 teaspoon ground black pepper

 Combine marinade ingredients in small bowl. Place beef steak and 1/2 cup marinade in food-safe plastic bag; turn steak to coat.
 Close bag securely and marinate in refrigerator 6 hours or as long as overnight, turning occasionally. Cover and reserve remaining marinade in refrigerator.

Remove 2 tablespoons of reserved marinade for ratatouille; set aside. Brush eggplant, bell peppers, zucchini and yellow squash with some of remaining reserved marinade.

3. Remove steak from marinade; discard marinade. Place steak in center of grid over medium, ash-covered coals; arrange vegetables around steak. Grill steak, uncovered, 16 to 18 minutes for medium rare doneness, turning occasionally. (Do not overcook.) Grill eggplant and bell peppers 12 to 15 minutes; zucchini and yellow squash 8 to 12 minutes or until tender, turning occasionally and basting with remaining reserved marinade.

4. To prepare ratatouille, cut grilled vegetables into 1-inch pieces. Combine with tomatoes, basil and reserved 2 tablespoons marinade in large bowl; toss to coat. Carve steak into thin slices. Season ratatouille and steak with salt and black pepper, as desired. Serve ratatouille with steak.

Wine Pairing: Serve this flavorful Italian-inspired dish with Sutter Home red or white wine. Rich, spicy Zinfandel can hold its own with grilled foods. For a softer approach, Merlot, with its ripe fruit flavor and velvety red texture, is perfect. And if you're a white wine fan, try a crisp Sauvignon Blanc or lightly oaked Chardonnay.

Ribeye Steaks With Blue Cheese Butter & Mushrooms

(Makes 4 servings)

Total preparation and cooking time: 35 to 40 minutes

4 well-trimmed beef ribeye steaks, cut 1 inch thick (about 12 ounces each)

2 tablespoons minced garlic

1/2 teaspoon pepper

4 medium portobello mushrooms, stems removed (about 14 ounces)

2 tablespoons Colavita Extra Virgin

1 teaspoon chopped fresh parsley

- 1. Combine thyme, garlic and pepper in small bowl; press evenly onto beef steaks. Set aside.
- 2. Brush mushrooms with olive oil. Place steaks in center of grid over medium, ash-covered coals; arrange mushrooms around steaks. Grill steaks, uncovered, 11 to 14 minutes for medium rare to medium doneness, turning occasionally. Grill mushrooms 16 to 18 minutes until tender, turning occasionally.
- 3. Meanwhile combine Blue Cheese Butter ingredients in small bowl until well blended.
- 4. Coarsely chop mushrooms; divide evenly among 4 plates. Spread Blue Cheese Butter evenly over each steak. Carve steaks into slices; arrange evenly over mushrooms. Season with salt, as desired. Garnish with parsley, if desired.

Cook's Tip: To rehydrate sun-dried tomatoes, cover with boiling water; let stand 10 minutes. Drain well before using.

Wine Pairing: The classic pairing with beef is Sutter Home Cabernet Sauvignon, excellent with tender, julcy ribeye steak. Or open Pinot Noir. It's a bit lighter in style, but has a subtle earthiness which mirrors that of the portobello mushrooms. — Bealth Beat

How to get rid of your knee pain

Question: Could you suggest an exercise for someone who has painful knees, and if there are any food or supplements that could alleviate the pain?

Answer: Osteoarthritis is the most common type of knee pain. It is caused by the progressive wearing away of the cartilage and other structures that cushion bones where they meet.

Weight bearing joints, such as hips and knees are the most affected, but any joint can be involved. Symptoms of osteoarthritis are pain with activities, limited range of motion, stiffness of the knee, swelling of the joint and a feeling of weakness.

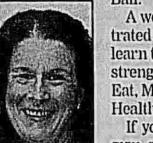

One way to help reduce pain is by correcting muscle imbalances between the quadriceps, hamstrings, glutes and iliotibial band (this band of connective tissue runs down the side of the leg from the hip to the knee).

Typically the quadriceps and iliotibial bands are tight and the hamstrings and glutes are weak. I would first recommend stretching and mobilizing those muscles and connective tissues that are tight.

Mobilize the iliotibial band first and stretch the quadriceps second.

After these muscles are stretched, the weak hamstrings and glutes should be strengthened. Exercises that help strengthen these muscles are squats, deadlifts and bridges with your feet on a Swiss

Ball.

Linda DeFever

A wonderfully illustrated book to help learn to stretch and strengthen is "How to Eat, Move and Be Healthy," by Paul Chek.

If you belong to a gym, a personal trainer would be able to show you stretches and exercises to help. A Corrective Holistic Exercise Kinesiology practitioner can provide you with an individualized assessment and strengthening program that would address your specific needs.

If you currently are doing aerobic exercise, I would suggest doing biking or swimming. These activities are easier on the knees. Remember all activities and exercises should be pain free. Listen to your body when you hurt – it is telling you something is not right. Working through some pain is not always good.

If you are on your feet all day, make sure you are wearing good shoes. If your shoes do not provide your feet with support, this can cause the arches in your feet to fall, creating stress on your knees.

Osteoarthritis responds well to wholesome foods. All empty and devitalized foods should be avoided, particularly processed grains, white sugar and rancid oils. One example of a wholesome food is broth made from animal bones. Broth is rich in factors that nourish cartilage.

A special oil of the omeg-6 family is gamma linoleic acid (GLA), found in evening primrose oil, black currant oil and borage oil. Studies have shown GLA to be helpful. I have found MSM (methylsulfonymethane) does help with arthritic pain. Icing after a long day or exercise is a great way to reduce inflammation, which will help with pain too.

Remember to train, not drain! Check with your doctor before starting any exercise program or taking any supplements.

Students help families moved by Katrina

By GREGORY HARUTUNIAN news@lakelandmedia.com

MUNDELEIN – It started quietly as an all-school service project last August, at Sally Potter School.

Teachers Marla Cotteleer and Linda Schmitt, along with student council members, found a way to help ease the suffering of families displaced by Hurricane Katrina that had relocated to Lake County.

Cotteleer constructed a free-standing "fair-booth" facade, made of spare cardboard boxes and packing, received start-up funds from the school administration to stock shelves with lunch snacks and healthy treats, and enlisted assistance from a core group of 12 students to operate the stand.

"It really took off, and all of the students got behind the idea, and helped support it, and raise money for Katrina victims in the community," Cotteleer said. "It was a huge success, and everyone learned a lot from this

"This effort is so representative of the responsible youth here in Lake County, and we can do nothing but commend the actions of these young ladies and gentlemen," Lee said.

Mother goes free after refusing judge's order

By EMILY PREVITI epreviti@nwnewsgroup.com

WAUKEGAN - Catherine Campbell spent Mother's Day at church with her 6-year-old son. The two then had dinner with close family friends.

Campbell, 44, felt lucky, not only to spend time with family and friends but also that she avoided jail.

She had been in Lake County Jail in Waukegan since May 9 after Lake County Associate Judge Jorge Ortiz found her in civil contempt for failure to comply with orders to engage her son in regular counseling as part of her divorce agreement.

On May 9, he sentenced her to 90 days in jail. Her ex-husband, Vincent Adams, took temporary custody of the boy.

At the urging of her lawyer, Bob Ritacca, Campbell apologized to the court at a hearing May 12 at the Lake County Courthouse. Ortiz said he would give Campbell an opportunity to comply with the order. She promised to do so upon release, which occurred that afternoon.

Ortiz emphasized throughout the proceedings that the justice system works to protect the best interests of the child.

Ritacca agreed with the court's intent and touted Ortiz's expertise.

"He listens to those types of cases every day," he said.

These events illustrate the interaction between the court and women who claim injustice in divorce and custody disputes.

More than 200 women in the Illinois Coalition for Family Court Reform have united to remedy the situation.

The organization has garnered enough attention that state Sen. Terry Link, D-Vernon Hills, attended a meeting May 12. It was the first opportunity that his schedule allowed, he said.

"I've met with a number of the ladies involved in the situation and they've been keeping me informed on the situation," he said.

Link said he attended to "listen and view."

Campbell, along with Erin McRaith, filed a federal lawsuit against the Lake County 19th Judicial Circuit Court.

The lawsuit names as defendants Ortiz, Associate Judge Joseph Waldeck, Chief Judge Jane Waller, Daniel Jasica, the chief of civil division for the Lake County State's Attorney's office; and court reporter Marian Vahl.

The lawsuit alleges discrimination and civil-rights violations regarding child-support and general proceedings.

Campbell had requested that Ortiz recuse himself from ruling over her divorce proceedings in January.

Campbell said she feared retaliation because of the other suit, which was dismissed in April.

She said they plan to refile it during the week of May 22.

In January, Ortiz denied Campbell's request for recusal from her divorce proceedings, saying that the federal litigation did not warrant it. Ortiz cited case law to support his decision.

Ritacca said Ortiz has "bent over backward" for Campbell, but that "the whole court system takes offense" when faced with such a suit.

"You have to watch what you say in front of judges," he said.

Bush adviser Rove plans stop in county

By ESTHER J. CEPEDA news@lakelandmedia.com

As the Bush administration struggles to maintain a Republican majority in Congress, Washington, D.C., is sending a clear message to the Illinois Republican Party that the nationally spotlighted race for the 8th District Congressional seat is a top priority.

Senior Bush adviser Karl Rove will be the keynote speaker at the Lake County Republican Federation's 44th annual spring dinner on May 19, county GOP Chairman Dan Venturi said.

Rove, who has been in the spotlight as a witness in the controversial Valerie Plame CIA-leak case, is a top Bush administration strategist. He will talk about political strategies used in the 2004 elections, and discuss Republican Party election objectives, Venturi said.

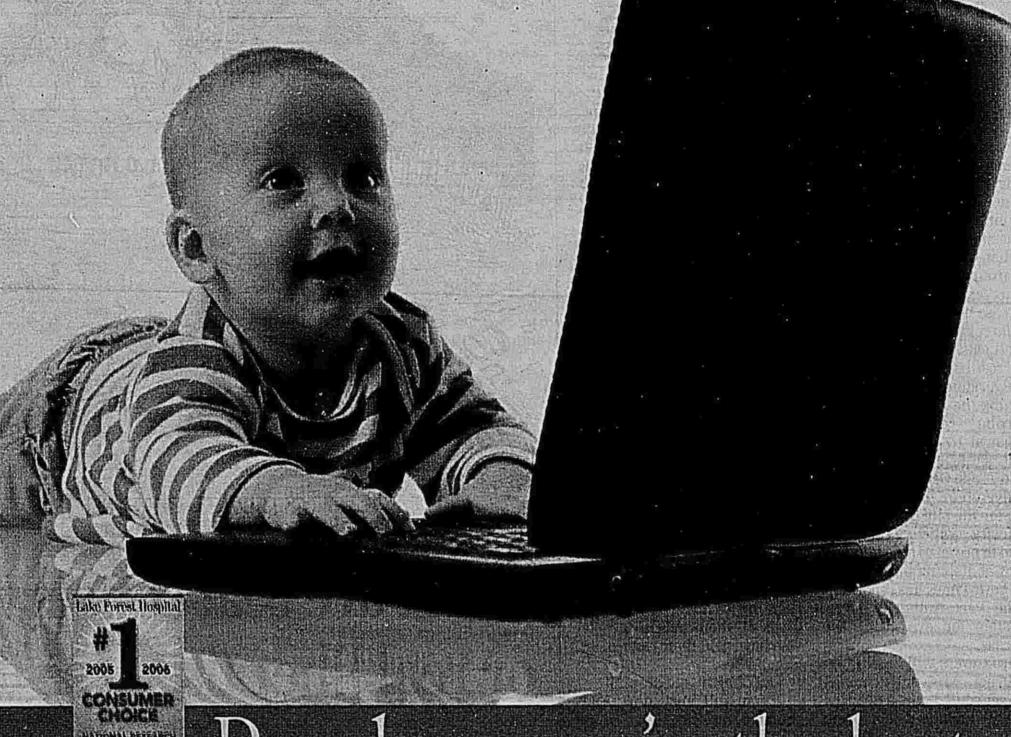

The presidential adviser's visit was arranged with help from state Rep. Tom Cross, R-Oswego, the GOP leader in the Illinois House.

"In the past, they were not as active in Lake County but they are really taking a key role es pecially because we've got a national spotlight race," Venturi said.

Venturi said the annual spring dinner will be an opportunity to re-energize the precinct committeemen, community leaders and volunteers.

District 8 is one of two national races where a Democratic victory could help break the Republican majority in Congress. Republican David McSweeney is challenging Rep. Melissa Bean, D-Barrington, which she won from Republican Phil Crane in 2004.

9/11 staircase fitting shrine

A staircase that hundreds of Sept. 11, 2001, survivors used for escape is the last aboveground vestige of the World Trade Center.

The "Survivors Staircase" has not been incorporated into the design of the new skyscrapers that will be constructed in and around Ground Zero.

The exterior Vesey Street staircase needs to be preserved to help remind the world about the attacks, as well as Americans' resilience.

Silverstein Properties is developing the Freedom Tower, a symbolic centerpiece skyscraper at 1,776 feet. It will be about 400 feet taller than the World Trade Center.

Silverstein has a 99-year lease for the site from the Port Authority, which seems inclined to preserve the staircase, if not at its current site, The New York Times has reported.

The Port Authority is responsible for excavating the staircase.

Five towers will be built on the 16-acre site, with completion scheduled for 2012. The site will include a memorial, certain to be a national shrine.

But the staircase is in the footprint of construction. It will be demolished, unless Silverstein, the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey. and the Lower Manhattan Development Corp. agree to save it.

Construction of the Freedom Tower began late last month. And last week, the nonprofit National Trust for Historic Preservation included the battered granite-clad staircase on its 2006 list of 11 endangered historical sites in the United States.

It could be a striking monument at the site.

The preservation organization based in Washington, D.C., compares it to the sunken USS Arizona in Pearl Harbor.

The Survivors Staircase is an important architectural artifact of Sept. 11. But it has been out of view of the hundreds of thousands of people who have paid their respects at Ground Zero.

Out of sight, out of mind. It's in full view now. And should be forever.

Seeing It Through

What are real conservatives or real liberals these days

AKE CO. BOARD

For some time now, I have said that I don't know anymore what a conservative or liberal really is. Both sides have blurred the terms, using them as sound bites to ensnare their own political agendas. In the same way, political extremists use the tags "far left" and "far right" to divide and conquer rather than to mold solutions to the real issues of the day.

So, often some of the "fogies" like me harken to what are called "the good old days." They were so good that none of us really want to go back to those days.

But, in some ways, there were differences that could be called refreshing.

For example, let's get back to what defined a conservative and what defined a liberal. In simple terms, a conservative was one who believed that the that government should involve itself in solving problems that people could not solve for themselves. Oh, yes, there were other differences between liberals and conservatives, but most of that related on how the resources of the country were spent.

We are in a day now when neither side bases its political future on government spending. They rattle their political philosophies, often hypocritical, on every conceivable social issue they can muster. Not that anything has been resolved by the divisiveness. What do they care?

They aren't about corralling government spending. Many aren't about resolving the social issues, either, as much as they like to try to convince you that they are. They really are about ranting and raving to preserve their political futures.

Business caught in down spiral

The little guy might be taking it on the chin again. Whatever your personal feelings are about tobacco use, I think we can all agree that a few miles of the Wisconsin border.

Sadly, it's not just the promise of smoking freedoms that drives business to other states.

Palatine's Harper College recently released the results of a study conducted by independent researchers in which senior executives of companies with 50 to 100 employees in the Northwest suburbs were interviewed about the state of business in Illinois.

Beside rising energy costs, competition from Asian firms, and a lack of employees with critical-thinking skills, an alarming picture emerged of a state antibusiness climate.

The report states: "While Illinois has started in a good position, with a mix of manufacturing and service industries, the state has developed into a climate inimical to company success."

Our current leadership has an eye toward the future, allotting budget dollars in education-heavy funding initiatives designed to help more children succeed in school. But if we aren't careful, we stand to make those sacrifices only to watch our college grads forced. to leave to find good jobs.

Invading MySpace

The societal ills of our world seem to be conspiring against children.

The childhood obesity epidemic has a death grip on our kids, our high schools have been faced with a rash of teachers who have certified themselves as highly qualified sexual predators, and My-Space.com, along with many other Web sites, are threatening kids' safety from the convenience of their bedrooms.

In a move that will prove that the cure might be worse than the ailment, schools across the country are considering policies designed to curb the abuse of Web diaries such as MySpace.com. Such is the desire of Libertyville-Vernon Hills District 128.

The board soon will vote on new policies that will penalize students found posting messages about illegal or inappropriate behavior like fighting, vandalism, lying to school officials or hazing.

The concept is a pipe dream. The Internet, like the world, is full of dangers, but no written school policy - or legislation for that matter can take the place of parental guidance and responsibility.

McSweeney touts 3-pronged approach to soaring gas prices

David McSweeney, candidate for Congress in Illinois' 8th Congressional District, released a one-page paper outlining solutions to the escalating cost of gasoline in August

McSweeney, who will take on Congresswoman Melissa Bean in the November election, called the paper his, "three-pronged attack on gasoline prices." It is available at his Web site, www.davidmcsweeney.com.

"The high price of gasoline has a ripple effect throughout our economy as the cost of travel and shipping products become burdensome,' McSweeney said. "It affects our ability to compete in the marketplace worldwide and it impacts every level of our economy including small business.

"We have not built a new refinery in this country in 30 years and we have an archaic set of fuel standards that defies the marketplace. Melissa Bean had the opportunity [May 3] to vote on legislation that would help to streamline the process for building new refineries. Instead of supporting the consumer's position she voted with the Democrats against HR-5254."

McSweeney said his "threepronged attack" including supporting a 5 percent reduction in the federal government's Strategic Petroleum reserve inventory. He added that he supported immediately creating a single national standard for refined gasoline.

The third of his points touts using closed military bases for building refineries.

"As a member of Congress, I will work to find solutions to the problems that the people of the 8th District are facing," McSweeney said. "Congress, and Melissa Bean, can tackle the issue of rising gasoline prices right now."

A vote for change

During the community development portion of Monday's Round Lake Village Board meeting, Mayor Bill Gentes stepped out of the council chambers for a couple of minutes.

The meeting was approaching the two-hour mark and since the trustees were discussing an item, Gentes' presence wasn't necessary.

After the vote was completed, Senior Trustee Don Newby called a short recess and scooted out to find Gentes, just as the mayor was entering the council chambers through another door.

The board started up discussion on the next item and began to call the role to vote. Newby entered and, hearing his name, voted "yes," even though he hadn't heard the discussion.

Trustee Sherry Perkowitz teased Newby that he had just voted to approve changing the village's name. In actuality, the board had voted unanimously to approve a contract with Heritage Land Consultants to prepare a legal description for the Western Trunk Sewer Recapture Area.

Public dissent

The Village of Gurnee board of trustees received mixed feedback from residents during public comment at its meeting May 15.

Kevin Moss, of Gurnee, has frequented meetings to express his dissatisfaction with the village's enforcement of traffic and sign ordinances.

However, at the May 15 meeting, he said he had not noticed any trucks parked illegally at Sam's Club or Wal-Mart over the previous weekend, which was a first, he said, "in years."

Brian Winter, village attorney, said the village had not entered into a formal agreement with either retailer about parking, but the village had disseminated literature.

· Moss also said he noticed "only one" illegally placed sign that weekend, but reminded the board of Memorial Day weekend's approach. With it, he explained, would come an influx of sales and, as a result, the possibility of illegal signage to advertise.

Sentiment switched when a resident accused Mayor Kristina Kovarik of using "puppets" to spread lies. He also charged her with engaging in "sweetheart deals.'

"When are you going to make good on your campaign promises?" he demanded.

Tony Maniscalco expressed his disagreement with the statements. He said people should focus on the cohesion of the community, and give new leaders a chance.

"If this administration doesn't do the right thing in the right amount of time, then I agree, we should criticize it, but you have to give people a chance," he said of Kovarik's one year in office.

LAKEMOOR

Minor delay in water deal

By GREGORY HARUTUNIAN news@lakelandmedia.com

LAKEMOOR – Approval of a pact between the Northern Moraine Water Reclamation District and Lakemoor will be delayed until May 25 as village officials requested an eleventh-hour extension to revise and chart easements included in the transaction.

At a May 9 meeting, district officials were ready to approve the Lakemoor annexation, which affected areas north and south of Route 120, and near Darrel Road.

The Village Board informed the district that legal descriptions of specific easements needed to be charted and revised before to the transaction could be formally accepted by all parties.

"We've hired a survey firm to complete that task, and we requested a two-week extension to make sure that Commonwealth Edison electric, and developer easements were in place," Lakemoor Village President Virginia Povidas said. "The reclamation district had also requested this, since they would be securing the easements along Fischer and Lily Lake roads, and along Route 120."

Village residents now pay an out-of-district rate for sanitary sewer service, based on the original contract and authorization grants enacted in 1976. The new agreement will take in the village and residents will pay in-district rates.

Sanitary service fees are expected to be $65 a quarter, and a yearly fee of approximately $30 per $200,000 value of a home. A million gallons of water is anticipated for treatment at the Island Lake plant.

WADSWORTH - If necessity is the mother of invention, then Beth Olzewski is one creative mother.

Now a full-time mother of three and resident of Wadsworth, Olzewski had worked in marketing.

During that time, she worked part-time, 30-hours a week, but noticed that she was taking more and more of her work home with her. She needed to find someone to watch her children.

Olzewski's husband, Ken, is a lieutenant on the Highland Park Fire Department and his schedule requires that he work 24 hours on and 48 hours off. She describes him as a regular "Mr. Mom" when he is at home, but his odd work schedule made it difficult to put their children in a commercial daycare center.

After searching on her own with little success, she started www.LakeCountyMoms.com, as an online directory for Lake County mothers to find home day cares.

Olzewski said the site's most popular features are the message boards set up for each town so parents can do things such as get play dates.

"It's exciting to see," she said. "Moms make new friends and kids will make new friends through play dates."

One post on a message board can earn 12 or more responses from other moms. At first, it was just Olzewski's friends and family welcoming new moms to the site, just to get the ball rolling, but now she says it supports itself.

In the beginning, Olzewski charged $14.95 a year for membership, but as of Jan. 1, she opted for a free subscription.

She was able to do that because the site now is supported by businesses that pay for ads and offer coupons to members.

MUNDELEIN

Reporter takes aim at local police work

By REBECCA KLUGIEWICZ rklugiewicz@nwnewsgroup.com

MUNDELEIN - I was nervous. I had never shot a gun.

But if anybody was going to teach me to shoot a gun, I'm glad it was a police officer.

Until the fourth week of the Mundelein Citizen Police Academy, a 10-week program to teach residents about law enforcement, the classes were lectures and demonstrations. The first hands-on activity was May 11, when we learned to shoot real guns.

I signed a list of safety rules, as did the other dozen or so students in the class, before heading down to the shooting range at Mundelein Police Department. The first thing I noticed was a dry-erase board with something written on it: "Train like your life depends on it!!! Because ... It does!"

The range has room for about three shooters at a time, complete with targets hanging from the ceiling. The back wall was metal coated with rubber from the ground up.

Officers Brian Kisselburg, and Brian Wainscott and Sgt. Joseph Bronge, spoke about safety, cleaning, and the different types of guns. They told us we would be shooting a .22-caliber handgun, a 9 mm handgun, and an AR-15 rifle.

"Trigger squeeze" and "sight alignment" are the most important aspects of shooting, Wainscott said. We learned to pull the trigger with the meatiest part of our index fingers.

"The rifle is probably the easiest one to shoot," he said.

He was right. I was in the first group to shoot, and I did the rifle first. It's heavier than it looks, but since it rests on the shoulder, the kick isn't bad.

Annie Christie - achristie@nwnewsgroup.com

More than anything, the noise scared me. I was surprised to hit the target each time I shot.

The most difficult was the 9 mm handgun. The kick was in-

New lens implant provides more freedom from glasses

A revolutionary advance in cataract surgery is now offered at Lake Forest Hospital.

"With the new multifocal intraocular lens (IOL), cataract patients have the potential to reduce their reliance on glasses," says Ophthalmologist Dr. Bradley Ruff, who has been performing multifocal IOL implants at Lake Forest Hospital since late February. "This new lens is a breakthrough in cataract surgery that we are proud to offer our patients."

The AcrySof" ReSTOR"
IOL, from Alcon Inc., provides patients with a full range of quality vision (near, intermediate and distance) and greatly reduces the reliance on glasses. In clinical trials, 80 percent of patients reported never wearing reading glasses or bifocals following bilateral cataract surgery.

The vast majority of patients who undergo cataract surgery today receive monofocal lenses, which typically requires them to use reading glasses or bifocals for near vision following surgery.

New lens implant provides more freedom from glasses

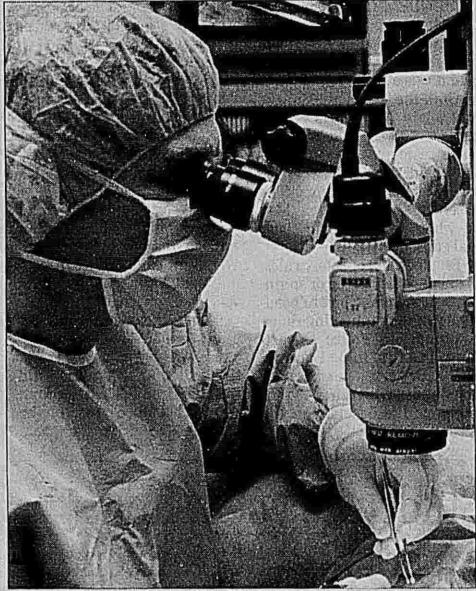

You don't have to have cataracts in order to realize the benefits of this new procedure. Ruff says anyone who needs strong glasses such as bifocals to correct vision may be a candidate for a refractive lens exchange (RLE) – cataract surgery to replace the lenses of patients who don't have cataracts.

The RLE patient gets the same refractive benefits of the multifocal IOL as the cataract patient. "While it's still considered cataract surgery," Ruff says, "the RLE procedure is much easier because there's no cataractous tissue present. It provides multifocal vision correction, as opposed to LASIK, which corrects only distance vision leaving most patients in need of reading glasses."

Ruff has been in private practice in Lake Forest since 1984. During this time he has performed more than 9,000 cataract surgeries with IOLs. Ruff also has taught and performed intraocular surgery in India, and was the medical and surgical eye consultant for the Chicago Bears for 16 years. He has been selected for all three editions of Chicago Top Doctors, published by Castle Connelly Medical LTD. His Envision Eye Center has offices in Lake Forest, Grayslake and Highwood. For more information, call (847) 295-0001.

LAKE COUNTY

Spending money once separated political sides

In that case, I believe that the "old" days" were better and more constructive, and government served us better.

I have seen it in my experience that there were Democrats who were tight with taxpayer spending and there were Republicans who were apt to "decorate" Christmas tree spending bills. Tabbing them with either side of the political spectrum did no justice to any of them.

I write this because I recently saw an interview with William F. Buckley Jr. Many have said that he was the founder of what is real conservatism, the term that emphasized how government spent the taxpayers' money.

True to his beliefs. Buckley criticized conservatives of these times for neglecting conservatism on the fiscal level. Naturally, he bemoaned the expansion of government by both parties and the fact that not one spending bill has been vetoed in more than five years.

I was surprised that Buckley, when asked if he had any regrets in his leadership of conservatism, and now 80 years of age, said that he and his conservative magazine should not have opposed the civil-rights legislation of the '60s. He said that the impact of that legislation should have been welcomed. It is apparent that his focus always has been on fiscal policies and his thinking that the civil rights was important, shows that there is such a thing as compassionate conservative.

Another thing Buckley criticized was the neoconservatives who supported the Iraq war.

As we head mindlessly toward being trillions of dollars in the hole. I thought this mention of "old fashioned conservatism" might arouse both political parties to get their eyes back on the fiscal ball.

Firms uneasy about smoke ban

By ESTHER J. CEPEDA news@lakelandmedia.com

Fearing their profits are going to go up in smoke, some northern Lake County business owners are not pleased about the Lake County Board's recent resolution in support of

"Smoke Free Lake County" initiative.

Several municipalities, such as Highland Park, Deerfield and Lincolnshire, recently have gone "smoke-free" all across Lake and Cook counties. The "smoke-free" initiative was offered by the Lake County Health Department.

But restaurants and bars in the northern part of Lake County might be feeling an extra squeeze if their smoking patrons opt to drive a few miles across the Wisconsin border, where they can enjoy a smoke after a meal or with a drink.

The Village of Antioch, which issues one-third of the county's liquor licenses, has taken no formal action to follow the lead.

"A formal action [to enact a smoking ban in the villagel is not in our near future," Antioch Mayor Dorothy Larson said. "I get a distinct feeling my board is not in support of this measure. I can certainly empathize with business owners who are concerned with the potential financial impact."

Even Lake County Board members were not in complete agreement about supporting the Health Department's initiative. The 14-9 vote in favor was debated for about an hour.
